INTRODUCTION

TO THE

SECOND PART OF KING HENRY THE FOURTH.

I. THE HISTORY OF THE PLAY.

This play was first published in quarto form in 1600, with the following title-page (as given in the Camb. ed.):

THE | Second part of Henrie | the fourth, continuing to his death, | and coronation of Henrie | the fift. | With the humours of sir Iohn Fal- | staffe, and swaggering | Pistoll. | As it hath been sundrie times publikely | acted by the right honourable, the Lord | Chamberlaine his servants. | Written by William Shakespeare. | London | Printed by V. S. for Andrew Wise, and | William Aspley. | 1600.

It had been entered by the publishers upon the Stationers'

Registers on the 23d of August, 1600, in connection with Much Ado about Nothing (see our ed. of that play, p 10)

In some copies of the quarto the 1st scene of act 111. Is wanting The error seems to have been discovered after part of the edition had been printed, and was rectified by inserting two new leaves. For these the type of some of the preceding and following leaves was used, so that there are two different impressions of the latter part of act 11. and the beginning of 111 2.

The play in the 1st folio was probably printed either from a transcript of the original manuscript, or from a complete copy of the quarto collated with such a transcript. "It contains passages of considerable length which are not found in the quarto. Some of these are among the finest in the play, and are too closely connected with the context to allow of the supposition that they were later additions inserted by the author after the publication of the quarto. In the manuscript from which that edition was printed, these passages had been most likely omitted, or erased, in order to shorten the play for the stage" (Camb ed.) On the other hand, the quarto contains several passages which do not appear in the folio Some of these were probably struck out by the author, and others by the Master of the Revels. The will be considered in detail in our Notes below.

The Second Part of King Henry IV. was probably written immediately after the First Part, and before the entry of the latter on the Stationers' Registers, February 25, 1598;* for that entry shows that the name of Oldcastle, which was originally applied to the fat knight in both plays,† had already

^{*} As the year did not then end until March 25, the date "February 25, 1597," on the Registers was of course February 25. 1598 (Coll).

[†] That this was true of 2 Henry IV. is evident from the fact that in the quarto of 1600 the prefix "Old." is retained before one of the speeches of Falstaff (see on i 2.113 below). Steevens, to be sure, suggested that "Old" might have been the beginning of some actor's name, but none been changed to Falstaff It was certainly written before Ben Jonson's Every Man out of his Humour, which was acted in 1599, for in that play Justice Silence is alluded to by name.

Drake makes the date of 2 Henry IV 1596, Chalmers, 1597, Malone, and recently Fleay, 1598, Furnivall, 1597-8.

II THE SOURCES OF THE PLOT.

As in the case of I Henry IV. (see our ed. p. 10), Shake-speare took the main incidents of his plot from Holinshed's Chronicles and from the old play of The Famous Victories of Henry the Fifth. The history of Henry is here continued from the battle of Shiewsbury, July 21, 1403, to his death and the accession of Henry V. in Maich, 1413.

III. CRITICAL COMMENTS ON THE PLAY.

[From Dr Johnson's Remarks on the Play.*]

I fancy every reader, when he ends this play, cries out with Desdemona, "O most lame and impotent conclusion!" As this play was not, to our knowledge, divided into acts by the author, I could be content to conclude it with the death of Henry the Fourth—

"In that Jerusalem shall Hairy die"

These scenes, which now make the fifth act of Henry IV, might then be the first of Henry V, but the truth is, that they do not unite very commodiously to either play. When these plays were represented, I believe they ended as they such can be found in the lists of the time that have come down to us, and Malone believed that the prefix crept into the quarto "merely from Oldcastle being, behind the scenes, the familiar theatrical appellation of Falstaff, who was his stage-successor." More recently Stokes (Chron. Order of Shakespeare's Plays, p. 57 fol.) has attempted to prove that 2 Henry IV. was not written before the entry of I Henry IV, but he gives no explanation of this prefix in the quarto are now ended in the books; but Shakespeare seems to have designed that the whole series of action, from the beginning of Ruchard II. to the end of Henry V, should be considered by the reader as one work, upon one plan, only broken into parts by the necessity of exhibition.

None of Shakespeare's plays are more read than the first and second parts of Henry IV. Perhaps no author has ever, in two plays, afforded so much delight. The great events are interesting, for the fate of kingdoms depends upon them; the slighter occurrences are diverting, and, except one or two, sufficiently probable. The incidents are multiplied with wonderful fertility of invention, and the characters diversified with the utmost nicety of discernment and the profoundest skill in the nature of man.

The Prince, who is the hero both of the comic and tragic parts, is a young man of great abilities and violent passions, whose sentiments are right, though his actions are wrong; whose virtues are obscured by negligence, and whose understanding is dissipated by levity. In his idle hours, he is rather loose than wicked, and when the occasion forces out his latent qualities, he is great without effort, and brave without tumult. The trifler is roused into a hero, and the hero again reposes in the trifler. The character is great, original, and just.

Percy is a rugged soldier, choleric and quarrelsome, and has only the soldier's virtues, generosity and courage.

But Falstaff—unimitated, unimitable Falstaff—how shall I describe thee? thou compound of sense and vice; of sense which may be admired, but not esteemed, of vice which may be despised, but hardly detested. Falstaff is a character loaded with faults, and with those faults which naturally produce contempt. He is a thief and a glutton, a coward and a boaster; always ready to cheat the weak, and prey upon the poor—to terrify the timorous, and insult the defenceless. At once obsequious and malignant, he satirizes in their absence those whom he lives by flattering. He is familiar with the Prince only as an agent of vice, but of this familiarity he is so proud as not only to be supercilious and haughty with common men, but to think his interest of importance to the Duke of Lancaster—Yet the man thus corrupt, thus despicable, makes himself necessary to the Prince that despises him by the most pleasing of all qualities, perpetual gayety—by an unfailing power of exciting laughter, which is the more freely indulged, as his wit is not of the splendid or ambitious kind, but consists in easy scapes and sallies of levity which make sport, but raise no envy. It must be observed, that he is stained with no enormous or sanguinary crimes, so that his licentiousness is not so offensive but that it may be borne for his mirth.

The moral to be drawn from this representation is, that no man is more dangerous than he that, with a will to corrupt, hath the power to please; and that neither wit nor honesty ought to think themselves safe with such a companion when they see Henry seduced by Falstaff.

[From Verplanck's Shakespeare.*]

The observations on the dramatic character, historic verity, invention, and style of the First Part of Henry IV^{\dagger} are in the main equally applicable to the Second Part. It having been written, as the external and internal evidence concur in showing, not very long after the first part, when the author's mind was filled with the characters, story, and the spirit of that, the two together have the unity of a single drama. It is, however, inferior to its predecessor as a work of dramatic art, though, in my judgment, not at all so as a work of genius It is not as perfect as the other as an historical tragi-comedy, as on its tragic side it has a less vivid and sustained interest, and approaches in those scenes more to the dramatized chronicle, in fact, adhering much more rigidly to historical authority, and deviating from it very little except in compressing into connected continuous actions events really separated by years Its nobler characters have much less of chivaline and romantic splendoui, and its action less of stage interest and effect, and its poetry far less of kindling and exciting fervour On this account it has long disappeared as a whole from the stage; but portions of it are familiar even to those whose knowledge of Shakespeare is acquired only from the stage, having been interwoven by Cibber, or some other manufacturer of the "acted drama," into the action of Ruchard III. Other portions, like the King's invocation to sleep, the Archbishop's meditation on the instability of popular favour, Lady Percy's lament for Hotspur, and the last scene between the Prince and his father, have sunk deep into thousands of hearts, and live in the general memory. Nor is the entire graver dialogue unworthy of these gems with which it is studded, for it is throughout rich in thought, noble and impressive in style, and the characters it presents are drawn, if not with the same bold freedom and pointed invention as in the first part, yet with undiminished truth and discrimination.

But on the comic side of the play there is no flagging either of spirit or invention. On the contrary, the humour, if perhaps less lively and sparkling, is still more rich and copious. It overflows on all sides. The return of a character of comic invention in a second part is a hard test of originality and fertility, which even Don Quixote and Gil Blas did not stand without some loss of the charm of our first acquaintance with them. Falstaff's humour, as well that which he exhibits in his character as that which he utters, is more copious, more luxuriously mithful, and—if the phrase may be allowed—more unctuous than ever. Those of his companions, whose acquaintance we made in the first part, lose nothing of their droll effect, and our new acquaintances, Shallow, Slender, etc, are still more amusing. The scenes in which these last figure give us a delightful peep into the habits of the rural gentry of old England, and, as mere history, are worth volumes of antiquarian research.

Both parts of this drama, as well as its prelude, Ruhard II. and its sequel, Henry V., present a continuous historical chain of revolutions, wars, conspiracies, and rebellions. Every incident is connected with some great political movement. Nothing can be more picturesque, more life-like, than the manner in which these are put into action, or more like the very reality of such things, than the ruminations, motives, conferences, counsels, and contests of the princes and chiefs and their followers. Nor does the poet allow our minds to rest on the mere external shows of the hurried and crowded scene. He is earnest and abundant in wise moral teaching. The instability of all moital greatness and the emptiness of human pomp and power—the dread responsibility of that power-the base ingratitude of the great, and the fickleness of the masses—the independence of conscious rectitude, all these, and other topics, are enforced in verses that have made them the lessons of youthful instruction and household morality wherever the language is spoken. Yet it is very observable that, though the facts and scenes from which these ethical teachings arise are all in some sort political. or connected with public transactions, the speculation or admonition is always of a personal nature, the philosophy ethical, not political, without any thing of those larger views of society as an organized whole, or of the conflicts of political principles, which may be found in the Roman dramas and elsewhere; as, for example, in the eloquent didactic dialogue of the strangely blended Troilus and Cressida.

This difference must be ascribed, I think, chiefly to the different periods at which these plays were severally produced—a circumstance which critics often overlook in their speculations upon Shakespeare's opinions, as well as in those upon his taste, style, and knowledge It has been shown, in the introductory remarks, in this edition, on the plays last referred to, that they were written some time after the accession of James I, when the great parliamentary and national struggle against the crown first commenced—when the royal authority and the rights of the people, in the republican sense of the term, began to be brought into collision—when the very principles of government were openly canvassed, when all those elements of the great approaching conflict of radically differing political opinions were fermenting in the public mind, and already entering into the popular elections. Although parties had not yet become finally arrayed in the distinct manner they became in the next reign, this state of things could not but familiarize the mind of a thinking man, however aloof from active participation in party, to general political reflection, and to make literary and poetical references to such topics, or exhibitions of such scenes, more acceptable to the public taste. Hence we find in those later dramas that the author looks more distinctly upon man as a member of a state, upon the various forms of civil polity, and upon the conflicts of party and revolutions of government, as influenced by political opinion. The English historical dramas, except the last one of the series, Henry VIII, were all written under the stern and steady rule of Elizabeth, and the author, still young, had grown up in a state of society where the only question of principle which had, during the memory of that generation or their fathers, divided the nation was that of religious difference, their only other notion of political party being that of the conflicts of rival houses, or of personal ambition It is probably fortunate, not less for the spirited accuracy of historic delineations in these dramas, than for their dramatic and poetic effect, that this was the case.

Even when the insurrections, revolutions, and contests under the Plantagenets really involved or affected the principles of freedom, and the substantial permanent rights and happiness of the subject, they did not (unless so far as the acquisition of Magna Charta and the subsequent appeals to it may be exceptions) take that form, but were struggles for immediate and practical objects, the redress of pressing grievances, the defence of chartered rights, or the overthrow of an oppressor. The divisions and dissensions, which, like the Wars of the Roses, deluged England with blood, had nothing in view beyond a change of rulers or of dynasty, neither attaining nor looking to, in the result, any object of a truly public nature, and leaving nothing to the faithful chronicler to record but (as old Hall says) "what misery, what muider, and what execrable plagues this famous region hath suffered."

Into all these conflicts, calling forth high energies and exhibiting stirring scenes and a crowd of majestic personages, the young dramatist entered with the very spirit and sympathies of the times, naturally assimilating his mind to that of the men of those days, and thus painting them and their deeds as they showed to their own generation, not as they now appear to the philosophical student of history. Thus he vehemently asserts, in the person of Richard II and his adherents, the indefeasible, hereditary right of kings, but shortly after makes the successful usurper, Bolingbroke, equally ready to rebuke rebellion and "hurly-burly innovation," without troubling himself to discuss the truth of the doctrine. or the propriety of its application, in the mouth of either. His business was with the passions and actions of men, not with the principles of government; and the Wars of the Roses were more graphically and vividly described in the absence of any wish or design, however indirect or remote, to inculcate political opinion or political philosophy, of any sort or colour.

At a later period, the poet generalized more, depicting, in Corrolanus and Julius Cæsar, the collisions of contending principles, or lecturing, with Ulysses, on "the unity and married calm of states."

[From Charles Cowden Clarke's "Shakespeare-Characters"*]

The character of Sir John Falstaff is, I should think, the most witty and humoious combined that ever was portrayed So palpably is the person presented to the mind's eye, that not only do we give him a veritable location in history, but the others, the real characters in the period, compared with him, appear to be the idealized people, and invented to be his foils and contrasts As there is no romance like the romance of real life, so no real-life character comes home to our apprehensions and credulities like the romance of Sir John Falstaff. He is one grand identity. His body is fitted for his mind-bountiful, exuberant, and luxurious, and his mind was well appointed for his body-being rich, ample, sensual, sensuous, and imaginative. The very fatness of his person is the most felicitous correspondent to the unlimited opulence of his imagination, and but for this conjunction the character would have been out of keeping and incom-Fancy a human thread-paper with Sir John's amount of rogush accomplishment! No power of reasoning could induce a motion of sympathy with such a compound. most men, wit is the waste-pipe of their spleen in contemplating the happiness of others, in Falstaff it is the main supply of a robust structure, and is the surcharge of fun and good His wit is the offspring and heir to his love of laughter, the overflowing of his satisfaction with himself and his good terms with all men. He keeps both body and mind in one perpetual gaudy-day; his is the saturnalia, the carnival, of the intellect, and his body he rejoices with sack-posset. and his mind with jokes and roars of laughter; and with him each acts upon and with the other—the true sign of a strong Falstaff's is not a "clay that gets muddy with drink;" his sensuality does not sodden and brutify his faculties, but it quickens their temper and edge. It gives wings to his imagination, and—to use his own words—fills it with "nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes." He is amenable to the charge of a host of vices, any one of which would strand and shipwreck an ordinary character. He is an indicted coward, a braggadocio, a cheat, a peculator, a swindler, and a liar, etc., and yet, withal, so far are we from voting him to Coventry for all his delinquencies, there are few of us who would refuse to "march through Coventry" with him, at the head of his scarecrows, and one reason for this tolerancenot to say this sleeve-laughing encouragement of his villainous courses on the part of all ranks and classes-is, that he himself appears to have adopted and indulged in them from an irrepressible love of humour and mad waggery. no hypocrite; and men, from instruct, and especially your men of the world, can extenuate many vices rather than that of hypocrisy. What bold impudence in that speech! "If my wind were but long enough to say my prayers, I would repent." He also tells the Lord Chief-Justice-who he knows well enough knows him-that he "lost his voice with hallooing and singing of anthems" His impudence is sublime; and that very impudence forms no insignificant item in his humour. for the grand secret of Falstaff's wit, and humour too, consists in an impenetrable and imperturbable self-possession. He proposes Bardolph-one of his rogues, as known as the church-steeple—to the silk-mercer as security for his payment. He is never thrown off his guard: or, if so, he is never foiled he recovers himself like a rope-dancer. In the famous eleven buckram-men scene. when the tables are turned upon him, and his scouling-off laid bare, his resource is-"Do you think I did not know ye? By the Lord, I knew ye as well as he that made ve."

When his men, Pistol, Nym, and the rest, are accused before Justice Shallow of robbing Master Slender while he is drunk, Sir John takes upon himself to dismiss the charge against them with those remarkable words. "You hear all these matters denied, gentlemen —you hear—the men deny it"...

With the genial spirit in which his sweet nature was conceived, Shakespeare contrives to throw in some dash of feeling-a motion of our common humanity-some extenuation, even in his worst characters, for, whatever they were besides, they were also men, and unmitigated evil belongs only to the origin of all evil-not to human nature accurate perception, however, of true morality, he has not imparted to the character of Falstaff-attractive as it is for its sociality, wit, humour, and imagination-any of those intrinsic qualities which would set him up as an object of imitation-of course in his convivialities, his roystering, and other laxities; but he has associated them with the meaner vices of profligacy, turning these to the fullest account in completing the character. Gioss as the knight is, and wonderfully as the poet has relieved that grossness by the most brilliant flashes of wit and diollery, no mortal, it is to be presumed, ever arose from reading the plays in which he shines with a less firm appreciation of the wealth of virtue in all its senses, still less could any one desire to mimic his propensities. This cannot be said of some modern creations that might be instanced, which, from their sneers at sympathy and mutual confidence—their constant depreciation of the most generous feelings of our nature, inducing suspicion and distrust of all human profession, would go to sap the foundations of what alone can support the social fabric.

It was requisite to our poet that the dissolute young prince should, in his scenes of extravagance, have immediately about his person companions endowed with accomplishments sufficiently eminent to induce him to "daff the world aside, and bid it pass." He has, therefore, enriched Falstaff with infinite wit and humour, combined, moreover, with uncommon sagacity and acuteness in appreciating the characters and dispositions of men; but to these great qualities there is the set-off of degrading and even rascal propensities. With talents less brilliant, Falstaff would not have attracted Henry, who, historically, was himself a man of talent and quick discrimination. With less bloated profligacy he would have attached him too much, and by so doing have compromised the laws of civilized society, which, with well-regulated minds, form also the dramatic law—to show vice her own scorn, virtue her own feature...

After Falstaff, the most perfect characters in the play are Shallow and Silence, the Gloucestershire justices Here again we have Shakespeare's astonishing power in individuality-portraiture. It is impossible to conceive a stronger contrast, a more direct antipodes in mental structure than he has achieved between Falstaff and Shallow, the one all intellect, all acuteness of perception and fancy, and the other, the justice, a mere compound of fatuity, a caput mortuum of understanding. Not only is Shallow distinguished by his eternal babble, talking "infinite nothings," but with the flabby vivacity, the idiotic restlessness, that not unfrequently accompany this class of mind (if such a being may be said to possess mind at all), he not only tattles on-"whirr, whirr, whirr," like a ventilator, but he fills up the chinks in his sentences with repetitions, as blacksmiths continue to tap the anvil in the intervals of turning the iron upon it. But Shakespeare has presented us with a still stronger quality of association in minds of Shallow's calibre, that of asking questions everlastingly, and instantly giving evidence that the replies have not sunk even skin-deep with them, rushing on from subject to subject, and returning again to those that have been dismissed. . .

His provincial habit of life is also indicated by his constant recurrence to his metropolitan days—the "mad days that he had spent at Clement's Inn" The idea of Shallow having been a roysterer at any period of his life! the very constitution of the man's mind confutes his boast, without the testimony of Falstaff; and that is the finest burlesque portrait that ever was drawn.

"This same staived justice hath done nothing but prate of the wildness of his youth, and the feats he hath done about Turnbuil Street, and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute I do iemember him at Clement's Inn, like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring. When he was naked, he was for all the world like a forlked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife. He was so forlorn that his dimensions to any thick sight were invisible, he was the very genius of famine, you might have thrust him and all his apparel into an eel-skin—the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him—a court!"

There is no point in which Falstaff's wit glows more brilliantly than in that remarkable power of exaggeration, and the above (a portion only of the entire portrait) is a confirmatory specimen

As if it were not sufficient triumph for the poet to have achieved such a contrast as the two intellects of Falstaff and Shallow—in the consciousness and the opulence of unlimited genius, he stretches the line of his invention, and produces a foil even to Shallow—a climax to nothing—in the person of his cousin, Silence

Silence is an embryo of a man—a molecule—a graduation from nonentity towards intellectual being—a man dwelling in the suburbs of sense, groping about in the twilight of apprehension and understanding. He is the second stage in the "Vestiges," he has just emerged from the tadpole state. Here again a distinction is preserved between these two characters. Shallow gabbles on from mere emptiness; while Silence, from the same incompetence, raiely gets beyond the shortest replies. The firmament of his wonder and adoration are the sayings and doings of his cousin and biother-justice at Clement's Inn, and which he has been in the constant habit of hearing, without satiety and nausea, for half a century. With one of those side-wind indications for which Shakespeare is remarkable, we are informed through Silence that Shallow has ever been repeating the stories of his London days

"Silence. That 's fifty-five year ago"

"Shallow. Ha, cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that this knight and I have seen !—Ha, Sir John, said I well?

At another time he says, as though Silence had been now first introduced to him, "I was once of Clement's Inn, where I think they will talk of 'mad Shallow' yet."

"Silence You were called lusty Shallow then, cousin."

Like a provincial-bred man, also, Silence thinks no heroes can be so great as those of his own neighbourhood. When, therefore, Pistol, in announcing the death of the old king, says to Falstaff, "Sweet knight, thou art one of the greatest men in the realm," Silence assents from politeness, but with a reservation—"By 'r Lady, I think he be, but Goodman Puff of Barson." Again, when they are all at dinner, and Silence waxes drunk, he suddenly falls to singing, so that Falstaff says, "I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle."

"Silence. Who, I! I have been merry twice and once, ere now"

It is noticeable, too, that even this scene of conviviality does not draw him out to the achievement of an entire song; but he trolls out odds and ends, which he associates with the last words he hears in the conversation. Shallow says, "Be merry, Master Bardolph: [and to Falstaff's page] my little soldier there, be merry."

"Silence. [Sings] Be merry, be merry, my wife has all "

Again, when Davy pledges Baidolph—"A cup of wine, sir!"—Silence chimes in with, "A cup of wine, that 's brisk and fine" But the cap-stone to his revely is when he accepts Falstaff's pledge to a bumper, and the knight, patronizing him, says, "Why, now, you have done me right!" Silence's reply is worth a whole mint

"Do me right,
And dub me knight, Samingo!

Is 't not so?
"Falstaff 'T is so
"Silence. Is 't so? Why, then, say an old man can do somewhat"

So real is this extraordinary scene that even his scraps become shorter and shorter, at length ending in two or three words, and when the party breaks up, Falstaff says, "Carry Master Silence to bed!"

[Mr. F J Furnwall's Introduction to the Play *]

The Second Part of Henry IV. is not up to the spirit and freshness of the First Part, all continuations do fall off, and this is no exception to the rule. How are Hotspur and the first impressions of Falstaff to be equalled? Even Shallow cannot make up for them. There's a quieter tone, too, in this Part II, though the rhetorical speeches are still kept up by Northumberland and Mowbray. The King leads, not at the head of his army, but in his quiet progress to the grave. The most striking speech in the play is Henry the Fourth's on sleep—to be set against Hotspur's fiery words in Part I. And as illustrating the change in Shakspere's manner of work as he giew, let us set this sleep-speech of the Second Period against the sleep-speech of the Third Period

[&]quot;How many thousand of my poorest subjects
Are at this hour asleep!—Sleep, gentle sleep,
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down,

^{*} The Leopold Shakspere (London, 1877), p alvin fol.

And steep my senses in forgetfulness? Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs, Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee, And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber, Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great, Under the canopies of costly state. And lull'd with sounds of sweetest melody? O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch A watch-case, or a common larum bell? Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains In ciadle of the rude imperious surge. And in the visitation of the winds, Who take the ruffian billows by the top, Curling their monstrous heads and hanging them With deaf'ning clamour in the slippery clouds, That, with the hurly, death itself awakes? Can'st thou, O partial sleep, give thy repose To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude, And, in the calmest and most stillest night, With all appliances and means to boot, Deny it to a king? Then, happy low, lie down! Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown."

"Mucbeth Methought I heard a voice city, Sleep no more! Macbeth does murther sleep! the innocent sleep; Sleep, that kints up the ravell'd sleave of care, The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath, Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course, Chief nourisher in life's feast."

Note in the Second Period the single idea and its elaboration, though justified by Henry's meditative mood, with the many short, pregnant metaphors of the Third Period, each left to the hearer's own mind to work out, quite in Shakspere's later budding style—seven metaphors in four lines. Yet surely Macbeth might well have expanded his thoughts. Any man less filled with his subject, less crowded with thought, than Shakspere, any man like the writer of Edward III, would surely have availed himself of this splendid chance to "show off" The contrast of Duncan, wrapt in sleep's security, yet pierced with muider's knife, the contrast of innocent sleep with the guilty deed, its balm his bale, its nourishment his poison, would have tempted a smaller man-but not Shakspere in his Third Period Each metaphor has its touch, and then off In Henry IV., Part II., the lower rank of people come more to the front. We've more prominence than before given to the low tavein-life, the country squire and his servants, the administration of justice in town and country which Shakspere's long experience made him sneer at, as against the knightly life of the former Part, notwithstanding its carriers This prepaies us for the fuller sketches of contemporary middle-class life in The Merry Wives chief characters of Part I. are further developed. the hand of sickness is on the King, yet "Ready, aye ready" is still his word; and as soon as Hotspur is beaten, another army marches against Northumberland and the Archbishop, whose two separate rebellions Shakspere has put into one. But his cares tell on him: the chronicler Hall calls his reign the "unquiete tyme of Kyng Henry the Fourth." His mind goes back o'er the troublous past, thinks on his old close friendship with his now foe Northumberland, and the dead And as the past Richard's prophecy of their falling out has little to comfort him, so the future has less His son's going back, like a sow to wallow again in the mire, cuts him to the heart, as sovereign even more than as father-

"O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows!
When that my care could not withhold thy riots,
What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
O, thou wilt be a wilderness again,
Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants!"

Was it for this that he'd suffered exile, risked his life, won England, and held it with his strong right hand? Surely a pathetic figure—the strong man worn with care, disappointed in his dearest wish, the labour of his life made vain Still, comfort was to come, the son who once before won back his father's willingly forgiving heart, again spoke words that again at-oned them. And in the King's last speech to his gallant heir we see the man's whole nature—wily to win, strong to hold, a purpose in all he did, not perhaps a hero, but a ruler and a king, a father too Such political lesson as Shakspere preached in these plays was, that though, like Elizabeth's crown, the succession to it might not be clear, the way to hold it was to govern strongly and well, and that the sovereign must not only attack his foes at home. but unite the nation by foreign war, as Henry V. Napoleon, Cavour, and Bismarck did. For Prince Hal we have one unworthy scene, two worthy ones The shadow of his father's death-sickness is on him, and he goes for relief-half disgusted with himself-(feeling that every one would call him a hypocrite if he looked sorry) to his old, loose compan-But there's not much enjoyment in his forced mirth. He feels ashamed of himself, and soon leaves Falstaff and his old life forever-"let the end try the man," as he says. It is clear that he now feels the degradation of being Falstaff's friend and Poins's reputed brother-in-law On hearing of the war again, as in Part I, he changes at a touch, and is himself. The next time we see him is by his father's sickbed, and again he wins to him his father's heart. by a bit of Falstaff-like cleverness and want of truth pare his first speech to the crown with his second giving an account of it to his father. But one part of that first speech he meant: that he'd hold his crown against the world's whole strength; and that was what King Henry wanted. When Hal becomes king, his treatment of his brothers, the Chief-Justice, and Falstaff is surely wise and right, in all three cases One does feel for Falstaff, but certainly what he ought to have had he got-the chance of reformation. What other reception could Henry, in the midst of his new state, give in public to the duty, slovenly, debauched, old sinner who thrust himself upon him, than the rebuke he did? Any other course would have rendered the king's own professed reform absurd.

In Falstaff we have in this Part II. the old wit and humour, the old slipperiness when seemingly caught, the old mastery over every one, till the triumph should come, when comes catastrophe instead. But we have more of the sharper, the cheat, the preyer on others (the hostess, Shallow, the soldiers at the choosing), brought out. The slipperiness is seen in his answers to the Chief-Justice's attendant, the Chief-Justice himself, the hostess, Prince Hal, and Doll (His excuse for dispraising Hal before Doll is repeated by Parolles for abusing Bertram to Diana in All's Well) The scenes with Shallow and Silence, and the choice of soldiers, are of course beyond the reach of praise. We cannot help noting the use that the old rascal meant to make of his power over the young king.

"Let us take any man's horses; the laws of England are at my commandment Happy are they which have been my friends, and woe unto my lord chief-justice!"

His end here is imprisonment for a time; and worse, to be chaffed by Shallow the despised, and not return it. This prepares us for his fate in The Merry Wives. The moral is the same as that of Love's Labours Lost. What is mere wit so valued by menareally worth? Wit

"Whose influence is begot of that loose grace Which shallow, laughing hearers give to fools"

"The rogues," says Miss Constance O'Brien, "all come to a bad end. Falstaff dies in obscure poverty, Nym and Bardolph get hung in France, Pistol is stripped of his braggart honour, and even the 'boy and the luggage,' as Fluellen puts it, are killed together. Poins alone, the best of the set, vanishes silently, without a word as to his fate, and so that wild crew breaks up and disappears, leaving the world to laugh over them and their leader forever (If Falstaff was drawn from a living man, that man must have been a little Irish; no purely English brains work quite so fast)" The contemporary allusions are still kept up in this play. We have the landlady's disjointed talk, which Dickens has reproduced for us Victorians, the Wincot of The Shrew Induction again, the tradesmen who "now wear nothing but high shoes and bunches of keys at their girdles," the coming in of glass drinking-vessels for silver ones, specially noted by Harrison,* the Thames tide in ii. 3. 63, as in the Rape of Lucrece,† the University and Inns of Court, the school-boys' breaking-up, the Cotswold man. All through, the play is Shakspere's England. One Amurath succeeded another in 1596 We may also notice the dwelling on special words, as "security," "accommodate," "rebellion," like Falconbridge's "commodity," and Lucrece's "opportunity."

Northumberland What news, Loid Bardolph every minute now

Should be the father of some stratagem.

The times are wild; contention, like a hoise Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose And bears down all before him

Lord Bardolph

Noble earl,

I bring you ceitain news from Shrewsbury.

Northumberland Good, an God will!

Lord Bardolph. As good,

As good as heart can wish.

The king is almost wounded to the death,
And, in the fortune of my lord your son,
Prince Harry slain outright, and both the Blunts Kill'd by the hand of Douglas, young Prince John
And Westmoreland and Stafford fled the field,
And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk Sir John,
Is prisoner to your son. O, such a day,
So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won.

So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won, Came not till now to dignify the times,

Since Cæsar's fortunes!

Northumberland How is this deriv'd? Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury?

Lord Bardolph. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence,

A gentleman well bred and of good name, That freely render'd me these news for true.

Northumberland. Here comes my servant Travers, whom I sent

On Tuesday last to listen after news.

Enter Travers

Lord Bardolph. My lord, I over-rode him on the way, 30 And he is furnish'd with no certainties

More than he haply may retail from me

Northumberland. Now, Travers, what good tidings comes with you?

Travers My lord, Sir John Umfrevile turn d me back With joyful tidings, and, being better hors'd, Out-rode me. After him came spurring haid A gentleman, almost forspent with speed, That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied hoise. He ask'd the way to Chester, and of him I did demand what news from Shrewsbury. He told me that rebellion had bad luck, And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold With that, he gave his able horse the head, And bending forward struck his armed heels Against the panting sides of his poor jade Up to the rowel-head, and starting so He seem'd in running to devour the way, Northumberland Ha!—Again.

Said he young Harry Percy's spur was cold?
Of Hotspur, Coldspur? that rebellion
Had met ill luck?

Lord Bardolph My lord, I'll tell you what;
If my young lord your son have not the day,
Upon mine honour, for a silken point
I'll give my barony never talk of it
Northumberland Why should that gentleman the Give then such instances of loss?

Staying no longer question.

Lord Bardolph. Who, he?

He was some hilding fellow that had stolen

The horse he rode on, and, upon my life,

Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news

Enter Morton.

80

Northumberland. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf, Foretells the nature of a tragic volume; So looks the strand whereon the imperious flood Hath left a witness'd usurpation — Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?

Morton I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord; Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask

To fright our party

Northumherland How doth my son and brother? Thou tremblest, and the whiteness in thy cheek Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless, So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone, Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night, And would have told him half his Troy was burnt, But Priam found the fire ere he his tongue. And I my Percy's death ere thou report'st it. This thou wouldst say, 'Your son did thus and thus, Your brother thus; so fought the noble Douglas! Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds: But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed, Thou hast a sigh to blow away this plaise, Ending with 'Brother, son, and all are dead.' Morton. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet:

But, for my lord your son,—

Northumberland. Why, he is dead.

See what a ready tongue suspicion hath!

He that but fears the thing he would not know

Hath by instinct knowledge from others' eyes

That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak, Morton, Tell thou an earl his divination lies, And I will take it as a sweet disgrace. And make thee rich for doing me such wrong ~90 Morton. You are too great to be by me gainsaid. Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain.

Northumberland. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy 's dead.-

I see a strange confession in thine eve: Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it fear or sin To speak a truth If he be slain, say so; The tongue offends not that reports his death And he doth sin that doth belie the dead. Not he which says the dead is not alive. Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news Hath but a losing office, and his tongue Sounds ever after as a sullen bell, Remember'd knolling a departing friend.

Lord Bardolph. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.

Morton. I am sorry I should force you to believe That which I would to God I had not seen: But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state, Rendering faint quittance, wearied and out-breath'd. To Harry Monmouth, whose swift wrath beat down The never-daunted Percy to the earth, From whence with life he never more sprung up. In few, his death, whose spirit lent a fire Even to the dullest peasant in his camp, Being bruited once, took file and heat away From the best-temper'd courage in his troops; For from his metal was his party steel'd, Which once in him abated, all the rest Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead: And as the thing that's heavy in itself. Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed,

So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss, Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety, Fly from the field Then was that noble Worcester Too soon ta'en prisoner, and that furious Scot. The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword Had three times slain the appearance of the king, Gan vail his stomach and did grace the shame Of those that turn'd their backs, and in his flight, Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all Is that the king hath won, and hath sent out A speedy power to encounter you, my lord, Under the conduct of young Lancaster And Westmoreland This is the news at full Northumberland For this I shall have time enough to mouin.

In poison there is physic; and these news, Having been well, that would have made me sick. Being sick, have in some measure made me well And as the wretch, whose fever-weaken'd joints, 140 Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life, Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire Out of his keeper's aims, even so my limbs, Weaken'd with grief, being now enrag'd with grief, Are thrice themselves Hence, therefore, thou nice crutch! A scaly gauntlet now with joints of steel Must glove this hand, and hence, thou sickly quoif! Thou art a guard too wanton for the head Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit. Now bind my brows with iron, and approach 150 The ragged'st hour that time and spite dare bring To frown upon the enrag'd Northumberland! Let heaven kiss earth! now let not Nature's hand! Keep the wild flood confin'd! let order die!

And let this world no longer be a stage To feed contention in a lingering act; But let one spirit of the first-born Cain Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set On bloody courses, the rude scene may end, And darkness be the burier of the dead!

Travers This strained passion doth you wrong, my lord Lord Bardolph Sweet earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour.

Morton. The lives of all your loving complices Lean on your health; the which, if you give o'er To stormy passion, must perforce decay. You cast the event of war, my noble lord, And summ'd the account of chance, before you said 'Let us make head.' It was your presurmise, That, in the dole of blows, your son might drop You knew he walk'd o'er perils, on an edge, More likely to fall in than to get o'er, You were advis'd his flesh was capable Of wounds and scars, and that his forward spirit Would lift him where most trade of danger rang'd. Yet did you say 'Go forth,' and none of this, Though strongly apprehended, could restrain The stiff-borne action What hath then befallen, Or what hath this bold enterprise brought forth, More than that being which was like to be?

Lord Bardolph We all that are engaged to this loss is Knew that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas That if we wrought our life 't was ten to one, And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd Chok'd the respect of likely penl fear'd; And since we are o'erset, venture again.

Come, we will all put forth, body and goods Morton. 'T is more than time; and, my most noble lord. I hear for certain, and do speak the truth,

The gentle Aichbishop of York is up With well-appointed powers he is a man 190 Who with a double surety binds his followers My lord your son had only but the corpse, But shadows and the shows of men, to fight, For that same word, rebellion, did divide The action of their bodies from their souls. And they did fight with queasiness, constrain'd, As men drink potions, that their weapons only Seem'd on our side, but, for their spirits and souls, This word, rebellion, it had froze them up, As fish are in a pond. But now the bishop 200 Turns insurrection to religion: Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thoughts, He 's follow'd both with body and with mind, And doth enlarge his rising with the blood Of fair King Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones, Derives from heaven his quariel and his cause, Tells them he doth bestride a bleeding land, Gasping for life under great Bolingbroke, And more and less do flock to follow him.

Northumberland. I knew of this before; but, to speak truth,

This present grief had wip'd it from my mind.

Go in with me, and counsel every man

The aptest way for safety and revenge.

Get posts and letters, and make friends with speed;

Never so few, and never yet more need.

[Exeunt.

Enter Falstaff, with his Page bearing his sword and buckler Falstaff Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water?

Page He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water; but, for the party that owed it, he might have more diseases than he knew for Falstaff. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me, the brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent any thing that tends to laughter, more than I invent or is invented on me: I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men I do here walk before thee like a sow that hath overwhelmed all her litter but one. the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then I have no judgment. Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap than to wait at my heels I was never manned with an agate till now, but I will inset you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel,—the juvenal, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet fledged. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand than he shall get one on his cheek; and vet he will not stick to say his face is a face-royal. God may finish it when he will, 't is not a hair amiss yet he may keep it still at a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn sixpence out of it; and yet he'll be crowing as if he had writ man ever since his father was a bachelor He may keep his own grace, but he's almost out of mine, I can assure him. What said Master Dombledon about the satin for my short cloak and my slops?

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph. he would not take his band and yours, he liked not the security.

Falstaff. Let him be damned, like the glutton! pray God his tongue be hotter! A whoreson Achitophel! a rascally yea-forsooth knave! to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security! The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is through with them in honest taking up, then they must stand upon security. I had as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth as offer to stop it with security I looked a' should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security, for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lanthorn to light him Where 's Bardolph'

Page He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse

Falstaff I bought him in Paul's, and he 'll buy me a horse in Smithfield; an I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were manned, horsed, and wived 50

Enter the Lord Chief-Justice and Servant

Page Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph

Falstaff Wait close, I will not see him Chief-Justice. What's he that goes there?

Servant Falstaff, an 't please your lordship

Chief-Justice He that was in question for the robbery? Servant He, my lord; but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury, and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the Lord John of Lancaster.

Chief-Fustice. What, to York? Call him back again 6
Servant Sii John Falstaff!

Falstaff Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Page You must speak louder, my master is deaf

Chief-Justice. I am sure he is, to the hearing of any thing good.—Go, pluck him by the elbow, I must speak with him.

Servant Sir John!

Falstaff. What! a young knave, and begging! Is there not wars? is there not employment? doth not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels need soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it

Servant You mistake me, sir.

Falstaff Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldiership aside, I had lied in my throat, if I had said so Servant. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiership aside; and give me leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Falstaff. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou gettest any leave of me, hang me; if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hanged. You hunt counter, hence! avaunt!

Servant S11, my lord would speak with you

Chief-Justice Sir John Falstaff, a word with you

Falstaff My good lord! God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad, I heard say your lordship was sick. I hope your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltness of time; and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverent care of your health.

Chref-Fustice. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Falstaff. An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales.

Chief-Justice. I talk not of his majesty; you would not come when I sent for you.

Falstaff. And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Chief-Justice. Well, God mend him! I pray you, let me speak with you.

Falstaff. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling.

Chief-Justice. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Falstaff It hath it original from much grief, from study and perturbation of the biain. I have lead the cause of his effects in Galen, it is a kind of deafness

Chief - Justice. I think you are fallen into the disease, for you hear not what I say to you Falstaff. Very well, my lord, very well; rather, an 't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal.

Chief-Justice. To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not if I do become your physician.

Falstaff. I am as poor as Job, my loid, but not so patient your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me in respect of poverty, but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or indeed a scruple itself.

Chief-Fustice. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Falstaff. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Chief-Justice. Well, the truth is, Sir John, you live in great infamy.

Falstaff. He that buckles him in my belt cannot live in less. Chief-Justice. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Falstaff. I would it were otherwise; I would my means were greater, and my waist slenderer.

Chief-Justice. You have misled the youthful prince.

Falstaff. The young prince hath misled me; I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog.

Chief-Justice Well, I am loath to gall a new-healed wound: your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gadshill; you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'er-posting that action.

Falstaff My lord?

Chief-Justice. But since all is well, keep it so; wake not a sleeping wolf.

Falstaff. To wake a wolf is as bad as to smell a fox.

Chief-Justice. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Falstaff A wassail candle, my lord, all tallow; if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Chief-Justice. There is not a white hair on your face but should have his effect of gravity.

Falstaff His effect of gravy, gravy, gravy

like his ill angel.

Falstaff. Not so, my lord, your ill angel is light, but I hope he that looks upon me will take me without weighing and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go, I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in these costermonger times that true valour is turned bear-herd; pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings; all the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You that are old consider not the capacities of us that are young; you measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls: and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too.

Chief-Justice. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye? a dry hand? a yellow cheek? a white beard? a decreasing leg? an increasing belly? is not your voice broken? your wind short? your chin double? your wit single? and every part about you blasted with antiquity? and will you yet call yourself young! Fie, fie. Sir John!

Falstaff. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head and something a round belly. For my voice, I have lost it with hallooing and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not the truth is, I am only old in judgment and understanding; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him! For the box of the ear that the prince gave you, he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible loid. I have checked him for it, and the young lion repents, marry, not in ashes and sackcloth, but in new silk and old sack

Chief-Justice Well, God send the prince a better companion!

Falstaff God send the companion a better prince! I cannot rid my hands of him

Chief-Justice Well, the king hath severed you and Prince Harry, I hear you are going with Lord John of Lancaster against the Archbishop and the Earl of Northumberland

Falstaff. Yea, I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my lady Peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day, for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily: if it be a hot day, and I brandish any thing but a bottle, I would I might never spit white again. There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head but I am thrust upon it: well, I cannot last ever, but it was alway yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If ye will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest I would to God my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is; I were better to be eaten to death with a rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion

Chief-Justice Well, be honest, be honest, and God bless your expedition!

Falstaff Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me forth?

Chief-Justice Not a penny, not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses Fare you well, commend me to my cousin Westmoreland [Exeunt Chief-Justice and Servant.

Falstaff. If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle A man can no more separate age and covetousness than a' can part young limbs and lechery.—Boy!

Falstaff What money is in my purse? Page. Seven groats and two pence

Falstaff. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse; borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster, this to the prince, this to the Earl of Westmoreland, and this to old Mistiess Uisula, whom I have weekly sworn to mairy since I perceived the first white hair on my chin. About it; you know where to find me—[Exit Page] A pox of this gout! 'T is no matter if I do halt, I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable. A good wit will make use of any thing; I will turn diseases to commodity.

Scene III. York. The Archbishop's Palace Enter the Archbishop, the Lords Hastings, Mowbray, and Bardolph.

Archbishop. Thus have you heard our cause and known our means,

And, my most noble friends, I pray you all, Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes:

And first, lord marshal, what say you to it?

Mowbray. I well allow the occasion of our arms,
But gladly would be better satisfied

How in our means we should advance ourselves To look with forehead bold and big enough

Upon the power and pulssance of the king

Hastings Our present musters grow upon the file

To five and twenty thousand men of choice, And our supplies live largely in the hope Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns With an incensed fire of injuries.

Lord Bardolph. The question then, Lord Hastings, standeth thus,-

40

Whether our present five and twenty thousand May hold up head without Northumberland?

Hastings. With him, we may.

Lord Bardolph. Yea, marry, there's the point But if without him we be thought too feeble, My judgment is, we should not step too far Till we had his assistance by the hand;

For in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this, Conjecture, expectation, and sui mise

Of aids incertain should not be admitted

Archbishop. 'T is very true, Lord Baidolph, for indeed It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury.

Lord Bardolph. It was, my lord, who lin'd himself with hope,

Eating the air on promise of supply,
Flattering himself in project of a power
Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts;
And so, with great imagination

Proper to madmen, led his powers to death And winking leap'd into destruction

Hastings. But, by your leave; it never yet did hurt To lay down likelihoods and forms of hope.

Lord Bardolph. Yes, in this present quality of war: Indeed the instant action—a cause on foot—Lives so in hope as in an early spring We see the appearing buds; which to prove fruit, Hope gives not so much warrant as despair That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build, We first survey the plot, then draw the model,

And when we see the figure of the house, Then must we rate the cost of the erection, Which if we find outweighs ability. What do we then but draw anew the model In fewer offices, or at least desist To build at all? Much more, in this great work, Which is almost to pluck a kingdom down And set another up, should we survey The plot of situation and the model, Consent upon a sure foundation, Ouestion surveyors, know our own estate, How able such a work to undergo. To weigh against his opposite, or else We fortify in paper and in figures, Using the names of men instead of men: Like one that draws the model of a house Beyond his power to build it, who, half through, Gives o'er and leaves his part-created cost A naked subject to the weeping clouds And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

Hastings. Grant that our hopes, yet likely of fair birth, Should be still-born, and that we now possess'd The utmost man of expectation, I think we are a body strong enough, Even as we are, to equal with the king.

Lord Bardolph. What, is the king but five and twenty thousand?

Hastings. To us no more; nay, not so much, Lord Bardolph

For his divisions, as the times do brawl,
Are in three heads: one power against the French,
And one against Glendower, perforce a third
Must take up us So is the unfirm king
In three divided, and his coffers sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness.

Archbishop. That he should draw his several strengths together

And come against us in full puissance, Need not be dreaded

Hastings. If he should do so,

He leaves his back unaim'd, the French and Welsh

Baying him at the heels, never fear that

Lord Bardolph Who is it like should lead his forces hither?

Hastings. The Duke of Lancaster and Westmoreland, -Against the Welsh, himself and Harry Monmouth: But who is substituted 'gainst the French, I have no certain notice.

Archbishop Let us on. And publish the occasion of our arms The commonwealth is sick of their own choice, Their over-greedy love hath surferted An habitation giddy and unsure Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart — O thou fond many, with what loud applause Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbroke, Before he was what thou wouldst have him be! And being now trimm'd in thine own desires, Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him, That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard, And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up, And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these times? They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him die, Are now become enamour'd on his grave: Thou, that threw'st dust upon his goodly head When through proud London he came sighing on After th' admired heels of Bolingbroke, Criest now 'O earth, yield us that king again,

And take thou this!' O thoughts of men accurs'd!

Past and to come seems best, things present worst

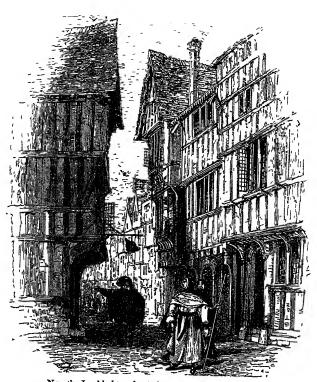

Mowbray Shall we go diaw our numbers and set on? 109

Hastings We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone

[Exeunt

CHIEF-JUSTICE SIR WILLIAM GASCOIGNE

Now the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool (11 r 177)

ACT II

Scene I. London A Street

Enter Hostess, Fang and his Boy with her, and Snare following Hostess. Master Fang, have you entered the action?

Fang. It is entered.

Hostess. Where 's your yeoman? Is 't a lusty yeoman? will a' stand to 't?

Fang. Sırrah, where 's Snare?

Hostess. O Loid, ay! good Master Snare.

Snare Here, here.

Fang. Snaie, we must arrest Sir John Falstaff

Hostess. Yea, good Master Snare; I have entered him and all

Snare It may chance cost some of us our lives, for he will stab.

Hostess Alas the day! take heed of him; he stabbed me in mine own house, and that most beastly. In good faith, he cares not what mischief he does, if his weapon be out. he will foin like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child.

Fang If I can close with him, I care not for his thrust.

Hostess. No, nor I neither; I'll be at your elbow.

Fang. An I but fist him once; an a' come but within my vice,— Hostess. I am undone by his going; I warrant you, he's an infinitive thing upon my score. Good Master Fang, hold him sure; good Master Snare, let him not scape. A' comes continuantly to Pie-corner—saving your manhoods—to buy a saddle; and he is indited to dinner to the Lubber's-head in Lumbert Street, to Master Smooth's the silkman. I pray ye, since my exion is entered and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long one for a poor lone woman to bear; and I have borne, and borne, and borne, and have been fubbed off, and fubbed off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on There is no honesty in such dealing; unless a woman should be made an ass and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong. Yonder he comes; and that arrant malmsey-nose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, Master Fang and Master Snare, do me, do me, do me your offices.

Enter Falstaff, Page, and Bardolph.

Falstaff How now! whose mare 's dead? what 's the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of Mistress Quickly

Falstaff Away, vailets! Draw, Bardolph! cut me off the villain's head, throw the quean in the channel.

Hostess. Throw me in the channel! I'll throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou bastardly rogue! Murther, murther! Ah, thou honey-suckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers and the king's? Ah, thou honey-seed rogue! thou art a honey-seed, a man-queller, and a woman-queller.

Falstaff. Keep them off, Bardolph

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Hostess. Good people, bring a rescue or two. Thou woo't, woo't thou' thou woo't, woo't thou' do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed!

Falstaff. Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you fustilarian! I'll tickle your catastrophe.

Enter the Lord Chief-Justice, and his men

Chief-Justice What is the matter? keep the peace here, ho!

Hostess Good, my lord, be good to me. I beseech you, stand to me

Chief-Fusince How now, Sii John! what are you brawling here?

Doth this become your place, your time, and business? You should have been well on your way to York.—Stand from him, fellow; wherefore hang'st upon him?

Hostess O my most worshipful lord, an 't please your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Chief-Justice For what sum?

Hostess. It is more than for some, my lord, it is for all, all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home, he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his; but I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee o' nights like the mare.

Chief-Fustice How comes this, Sii John? Fie! what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Falstaff. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Hostess. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thyself and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, on Wednesday in Wheeson week, when the prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor, thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Keech, the butcher's wife, come in then and call me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar, telling us she had a good dish of prawns, whereby thou didst desire to eat some, whereby I told thee they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarity with such poor people; saying that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath, deny it, if thou canst

Falstaff. My lord, this is a poor mad soul; and she says up and down the town that her eldest son is like you she hath been in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you I may have redress against them.

Chief-Fustice Sir John, Sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration; you have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and in person 105

Hostess. Yea, in tiuth, my loid

Chief-Justice Pray thee, peace — Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villainy you have done her, the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance.

Falstaff. My lord, I will not undergo this sneap without reply. You call honourable boldness impudent sauciness, if a man will make courtesy and say nothing, he is viituous. No, my lord, my humble duty remembered, I will not be your suitor. I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs.

Chief-Justice You speak as having power to do wrong, but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Falstaff. Come hither, hostess

Enter GOWER

Chief-Justice. Now, Master Gower, what news? Gower. The king, my lord, and Harry Prince of Wales

Are near at hand, the rest the paper tells.

Falstaff. As I am a gentleman

Hostess. Faith, you said so before.

Falstaff As I am a gentleman Come, no more words of it.

Hostess By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate and the tapestry of my dining-chambers

Falstaff. Glasses, glasses, is the only dunking, and for thy walls, a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the Prodigal, or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangings and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound, if thou canst Come, an't were not for thy humours, there's not a better wench in England thy face, and draw the action Come, thou must not be in this humour with me, dost not know me? come, come, I know thou wast set on to this Hostess. Pray thee, Sir John, let it be but twenty nobles, 1' faith, I am loath to pawn my plate, so God save me, la!

Falstaff Let it alone; I'll make other shift, you'll be a fool still.

Hostess. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope you'll come to supper You'll pay me all together? Falstaff. Will I live? - | To Bardolph | Go, with her, with her; hook on, hook on Hostess Will you have Doll Tearsheet meet you at supper? Falstaff No more words, let's have her.

[Exeunt Hostess, Bardolph, Officers, and Boy

Chief- Fustice. I have heard better news.

150

Falstaff What 's the news, my lord?

Chief- Fustice Where lay the king last night?

Gower. At Basingstoke, my lord.

Falstaff. I hope, my lord, all's well, what is the news, my lord?

Chief-Fustice Come all his forces back?

Gower. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse,

Are march'd up to my lord of Lancaster,

Against Northumberland and the Archbishop

159 Falstaff. Comes the king back from Wales, my noble lord?

Chief-Fustice. You shall have letters of me presently:

Come, go along with me, good Master Gower.

Falstaff. My lord!

Chief-Fustice What's the matter?

Falstaff. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?

Gower. I must wait upon my good lord here, I thank you, good Sir John.

Chief-Justice. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go.

Falstaff Will you sup with me, Master Gowei?

Chief-Justice. What foolish master taught you these manners, Sir John?

Falstaff Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me.—This is the right fencing grace, my lord, tap for tap, and so part fair

Chief-Justice Now the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool. [Exeunt.

Scene II. London Another Street Enter Prince Henry and Poins.

Prince Before God, I am exceeding weary.

Poins Is 't come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood

Prince Faith, it does me, though it discolours the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?

Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition.

Prince Belike then my appetite was not princely got, for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me to remember thy name! or to know thy face to morrow! or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast, viz. these, and those that were thy peach-coloured ones! or to bear the inventory of thy shirts, as, one for superfluity, and another for use! But that the tennis-court keeper knows better than I; for it is a low ebb of linen with thee when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland: and God knows, whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen shall inherit his kingdom.

Poins How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is?

Prince. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?

Poins. Yes, faith; and let it be an excellent good thing

Prince. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.

Poins Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.

Prince Mairy, I tell thee, it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick, albeit I could tell to thee, as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend, I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject.

Prince By this hand, thou thinkest me as far in the devil's book as thou and Falstaff for obduracy and persistency, let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick, and keeping such vile company as thou art hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow

Poins The reason?

Prince What wouldst thou think of me, if I should weep? Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite...

Prince. It would be every man's thought; and thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine, every man would think me an hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so?

Poins. Why, because you have been so lewd and so much engraffed to Falstaff.

Prince. And to thee

Poins. By this light, I am well spoke on, I can hear it with mine own ears the worst that they can say of me is that I am a second brother and that I am a proper fellow of my hands, and those two things, I confess, I cannot help By the mass, here comes Baidolph.

Enter BARDOLPH and Page

Prince And the boy that I gave Falstaff he had him from me Christian, and look, if the fat villain have not transformed him ape.

Bardolph God save your grace!

Prince And yours, most noble Bardolph?

Bardolph Come, you viituous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man-at-aims are you become!

Page. A' calls me e'en now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window, at last I spied his eyes, and methought he had made two holes in the ale-wife's new petticoat and peeped through.

Prince Has not the boy profited?

Bardolph Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away!

Prince Instruct us, boy, what dream, boy?

Page Marry, my lord, Althæa dreamed she was delivered of a fire-brand; and therefore I call him her dream.

Prince A crown's worth of good interpretation.—There 't is, boy

Pours. O, that this good blossom could be kept from cankers!—Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee.

Bardolph. An you do not make him hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.

Prince. And how doth thy master, Bardolph?

Bardolph Well, my lord. He heard of your grace's coming to town, there's a letter for you.

Poins. Delivered with good respect.—And how doth the martlemas, your master?

Bardolph. In bodily health, sir.

Poins Marry, the immortal part needs a physician, but that moves not him; though that be sick, it dies not.

Prince. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog: and he holds his place, for look you how he writes.

Poins. [Reads] 'John Falstaff, knight,'—every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself. even like those that are kin to the king; for they never prick their finger but they say, 'There's some of the king's blood spilt.' 'How comes that' says he, that takes upon him not to conceive. The answer is as ready as a borrower's cap, 'I am the king's poor cousin, sir'

Prince Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But to the letter.

Poins. [Reads] 'Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the king, nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting.'—Why, this is a certificate.

Prince. Peace!

Poins. [Reads] 'I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity;' he sure means brevity in breath, short-winded. 'I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee Be not too familiar with Poins; for he misuses thy favours so much, that he swears thou art to marry his sister Nell Repent at idle times as thou mayest, and so, farewell.

'Thine, by yea and no, which is as much as to say, as thou usest him, Jack Falstaff with my familiars, John with my brothers and sisters, and Sir John with all Europe.'

My lord, I'll steep this letter in sack and make him eat it.

Prince. That's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must I marry your sister?

Poins. God send the wench no worse fortune! But I never Poins. God send the wench no worse fortune! But I never said so.

Prince. Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us.—Is your master here in London?

Bardolph Yea, my lord

Prince Where sups he? doth the old boar feed in the old frank?

130

Bardolph At the old place, my lord, in Eastcheap

Prince What company?

Page. Ephesians, my loid, of the old church.

Prince Sup any women with him?

Page None, my loid, but old Mistress Quickly and Mistress Doll Tearsheet

Prince What pagan may that be?

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's.

Prince Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper?

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord, I'll follow you 139

Prince Siriah, you boy, and Bardolph, no word to your master that I am yet come to town. There's for your silence

Bardolph I have no tongue, sir

Page. And for mine, sir, I will govern it

Prince Fare you well, go —[Exeunt Bardolph and Page] How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins Put on two leathern jerkins and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

Prince. From a God to a bull? a heavy declension! it was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice? a low transformation! that shall be mine, for in every thing the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. [Exeunt

Scene III. Warkworth Before the Castle.

Enter Northumberland, Lady Northumberland, and Lady Percy.

Northumberland I prithee, loving wife, and gentle daughter,

TO

30

Give even way unto my rough affairs; Put not you on the visage of the times, And be like them to Percy troublesome.

Lady Northumberland I have given over, I will speak no more.

Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

Northumberland Alas, sweet wife, my honour is at pawn;
And, but my going, nothing can redeem it.

Lady Percy. O yet, for God's sake, go not to these wars!

The time was, father, that you broke your word, When you were more endear'd to it than now, When your own Percy, when my heart's dear Harry, Threw many a northward look to see his father Bring up his powers, but he did long in vain. Who then persuaded you to stay at home? There were two honours lost, yours and your son's. For yours, the God of heaven brighten it! For his, it stuck upon him as the sun In the grey vault of heaven, and by his light Did all the chivalry of England move To do brave acts; he was indeed the glass Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves. He had no legs that practis'd not his gait; And speaking thick, which nature made his blemish, Became the accents of the valiant; For those that could speak low and tardily Would turn their own perfection to abuse, To seem like him · so that in speech, in gait, In diet, in affections of delight, In military rules, humours of blood, He was the mark and glass, copy and book, That fashion'd others. And him, O wondrous him! O miracle of men! him did you leave, Second to none, unseconded by you,

To look upon the hideous god of war In disadvantage, to abide a field Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's name Did seem defensible. so you left him.

Never, O never, do his ghost the wrong To hold your honour more precise and nice With others than with him! let them alone. The marshal and the archbishop are strong; Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers, To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck, Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.

Northumberland. Beshrew your heart, Fair daughter, you do draw my spirits from me With new lamenting ancient oversights. But I must go and meet with danger there, Or it will seek me in another place And find me worse provided

Lady Northumberland. O, fly to Scotland, Till that the nobles and the armed commons Have of their puissance made a little taste

Lady Percy. If they get ground and vantage of the king, Then join you with them, like a rib of steel, To make strength stronger; but, for all our loves, First let them try themselves So did your son; He was so suffer'd: so came I a widow; And never shall have length of life enough To rain upon remembrance with mine eyes, That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven, for recordation to my noble husband.

Northumberland Come, come, go in with me 'T is with my mind

As with the tide swell'd up unto his height, That makes a still-stand, running neither way. Fain would I go to meet the aichbishop, But many thousand reasons hold me backI will resolve for Scotland, there am I, Till time and vantage crave my company.

Exeunt.

Scene IV. London The Boar's-head Tavern in Eastcheap. Enter two Drawers.

- I Drawer. What the devil hast thou brought there? apple-johns? thou knowest Sir John cannot endure an apple-john.
- 2 Drawer. Mass, thou sayest true. The prince once set a dish of apple-johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns, and, putting off his hat, said 'I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, withered knights' It angered him to the heait; but he hath forgot that.
- I Drawer. Why, then, cover, and set them down and see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise, Mistress Tearsheet would fain hear some music
- 2 Drawer. Sirrah, here will be the prince and Master Poins anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons, and Sir John must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word.
- I Drawer. By the mass, here will be old utis; it will be an excellent stratagem.
 - 2 Drawer. I'll see if I can find out Sneak. [Exit.

Enter Hostess and Doll Tearsheet.

Hostess. I' faith, sweetheart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperality; your pulsidge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire, and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose, in good truth, la! But, i' faith, you have drunk too much canaries; and that 's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say 'What 's this?'—How do you now?

Doll. Better than I was; hem!

Hostess. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Lo, here comes Sir John.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Falstaff [Singing] 'When Arthur first in court—And was a worthy king'—[Exit I Drawer.]—How now, Mistress Doll!

Hostess. Sick of a calm, yea, good faith.

Falstaff So is all her sect, an they be once in a calm, they are sick.

Doll. You muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Falstaff You make fat rascals, Mistress Doll.

Doll I make them! gluttony and diseases make them, I make them not. 38

Hostess By my troth, this is the old fashion; you two never meet but you fall to some discord, you are both, i' good truth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts, you cannot one bear with another's confirmities What the good-year! one must bear, and that must be you; you are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel.

Doll. Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack, thou art going to the wars, and whether I shall ever see thee again or no, there is nobody cares.

Re-enter 1 Drawer.

1 Drawer. Sir, Ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Doll. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither; it is the foul-mouthed'st rogue in England.

Hostess. If he swagger, let him not come here: no, by my faith; I must live among my neighbours, I'll no swaggerers. I am in good name and fame with the very best.—Shut the door;—there comes no swaggerers here I have not lived all this while, to have swaggering now.—Shut the door, I pray you.

Falstaff. Dost thou hear, hostess?

Hostess. Pray ye, pacify yourself, Sir John; there comes no swaggerers here.

Falstaff. Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient.

Hostess. Tilly-fally, Sir John, ne'er tell me, your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before Master Tisick, the debuty, t'other day; and, as he said to me—'t was no longer ago than Wednesday last—'I' good faith, neighbour Quickly,' says he—Master Dumbe, our minister, was by then—'neighbour Quickly,' says he, 'receive those that are civil, for,' said he, 'you are in an ill name.' Now a' said so, I can tell whereupon; 'for,' says he, 'you are an honest woman, and well thought on, therefore take heed what guests you receive. receive,' says he, 'no swaggering companions' There comes none here,—you would bless you to hear what he said.—No, I'll no swaggerers.

Falstaff. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, i' faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound he'll not swagger with a Barbary hen, if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance.—Call him up, drawer.

Exit I Drawer.

Hostess. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater: but I do not love swaggering, by my troth; I am the worse, when one says swagger—Feel, masters, how I shake; look you, I warrant you.

Doll. So you do, hostess

Hostess. Do I? yea, in very truth, do I, an 't were an aspen leaf. I cannot abide swaggerers.

Enter PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Pistol. God save you, Sir John!

Falstaff. Welcome, Ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack; do you discharge upon mine hostess Pistol. I will discharge upon her, Sir John.

Falstaff. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her.

Hostess. Come, I'll drink no proofs, I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I.

Psstol. Then to you, Mistress Doiothy, I will charge you. Doll. Charge me! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meat for your master.

Pistol. I know you, Mistress Doiothy.

Doll. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy bung, away! by this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket-hilt stale juggler, you! Since when, I pray you, sir? God's light, with two points on your shoulder? much!

Pistol. God let me not live, but I will murther your ruff for this.

Falstaff No more, Pistol, I would not have you go off here · discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Hostess No, good Captain Pistol, not here, sweet captain. Doll. Captain! thou abominable damned cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain? An captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out, for taking their names upon you before you have earned them. You a captain! you slave, for what? He a captain! hang him, rogue! he lives upon mouldy stewed prunes and dried cakes. A captain! God's light, these villains will make the word captain odious; therefore captains had need look to 't.

Bardolph. Pray thee, go down, good ancient. Falstaff. Haik thee hither, Mistress Doll.

Pistol. Not I. I tell thee what, Corporal Bardolph, I could tear her; I'll be revenged of her.

Pistol. I'll see her damned first; to Pluto's damned lake, by this hand, to the infernal deep, with Elebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down, down, dogs! down, faitors! Have we not Hiren here?

130

Hostess. Good Captain Peesel, be quiet, 't is very late, i' faith I beseek you now, aggravate your choler.

Pistol. These be good humours, indeed! Shall pack-horses

And hollow pamper'd jades of Asia,

Which cannot go but thirty mile a-day,

Compare with Cæsars, and with Cannibals,

And Trojan Greeks? nay, rather damn them with King Cerberus; and let the welkin roar.

Shall we fall foul for toys?

Hostess. By my troth, captain, these are very bitter words. Bardolph Be gone, good ancient, this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pistol Die men like dogs! give crowns like pins! Have we not Hiren heie?

Hostess. O' my word, captain, there 's none such here. What the good-year! do you think I would deny her? For God's sake, be quiet.

Pistol. Then feed, and be fat, my fair Calipolis.

Come, give 's some sack.

Si fortune me tormente, sperato me contento.

Fear we broadsides? no, let the fiend give fire.

Give me some sack, and, sweetheart, he thou there.

[Laying down his sword.

Come we to full points here, and are etceteras nothing?

Falstaff. Pistol, I would be quiet.

Pistol. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neif. What! we have seen the seven stars.

Doll. For God's sake, thrust him down stairs; I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pistol. Thrust him down stairs! know we not Galloway nags?

Falstaff. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shove-groat shilling, nay, an a' do nothing but speak nothing, a' shall be nothing here.

Bardolph Come, get you down stairs.

Pistol. What! shall we have incision? shall we imbrue?—

[Snatching up his sword.

Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days! Why, then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds

Untwine the Sisters Three! Come, Atropos, I say!

Hostess. Here 's goodly stuff toward! Falstaff. Give me my rapier, boy.

Dell I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw.

Falstaff. Get you down stairs.

[Drawing, and driving Pistol out

Hostess. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afore I'll be in these turits and frights. So, murther, I warrant now.—Alas, alas! put up your naked weapons, put up your naked weapons [Exeunt Pistol and Bardolph.

Doll. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet; the rascal's gone. Ah, you whoreson little valiant villain, you!

Hostess. Are you not hurt i' the groin? methought a' made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

Re-enter BARDOLPH

Falstaff. Have you turned him out o' doors?

Bardolph. Yea, sir. The rascal's drunk. You have hurt him, sir, i' the shoulder.

Falstaff. A rascal! to brave me!

Doll. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweatest! come, let me wipe thy face;—come on, you whoreson chops—Ah, rogue! i' faith, I love thee, thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the Nine Worthies. Ah, villain!

Falstaff. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket.

Enter Music.

Falstaff. Let them play.—Play, sirs.—A rascal bragging slave! the logue fled from me like quicksilver.

Doll. I' faith, and thou followedst him like a church Thou whoreson little tidy Baitholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting and foining, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven?

Enter, behind, PRINCE HENRY and Poins, disguised

Falstaff. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's-head; do not bid me remember mine end Doll. Sirrah, what humour's the prince of?

Falstaff. A good shallow young fellow, a' would have made a good pantler, a' would ha' chipped blead well.

Doll. They say Poins has a good wit.

Falstaff He a good wit? hang him, baboon! his wit's as thick as Tewksbury mustard; there's no more conceit in him than is in a mallet.

Doll. Why does the prince love him so, then?

Falstaff. Because their legs are both of a bigness, and a' plays at quoits well, and eats conger and fennel, and drinks off candles' ends for flap-dragons, and rides the wild-mare with the boys, and jumps upon joined-stools, and swears with a good grace, and wears his boots very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg, and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties a' has, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admits him: for the prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoirdupois.

Prince. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins Let's beat him.

Prince Look, whether the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Falstaff. Kiss me, Doll.

Prince. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanac to that?

Pours. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lisping to his master's old tables, his note-book, his counsel-keeper.

Falstaff. Thou dost give me flattering busses.

Doll. By my troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart. Falstaff I am old, I am old.

Doll. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all.

Falstaff. What stuff wilt have a kutle of? I shall receive money o' Thursday; thou shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song, come! it grows late. Thou'lt forget me when I am gone.

Doll. By my troth, thou 'lt set me a-weeping, an thou sayest so. prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return.—Well, hearken the end

Falstaff. Some sack, Francis.

Prince Anon, anon, sir.

[Coming forward.

Falstaff. Ha! a bastard son of the king's?—And ait not thou Poins his brother?

Prince. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead!

Falstaff. A better than thou; I am a gentleman, thou art a drawer.

Prince. Very true, sir; and I come to draw you out by the ears

Hostess. O, the Lord preserve thy good grace! by my troth, welcome to London.—Now, the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu, are you come from Wales?

Falstaff Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty, by this light flesh and corrupt blood, thou art welcome.

Doll. How, you fat fool! I scorn you.

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

Prince. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did burns, poor soul. For the other, I owe her money; and whether she be damned for that, I know not.

Hostess. No, I warrant you.

Falstaff No, I think thou art not; I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which I think thou wilt howl.

Hostess. All victuallers do so; what's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent?

Prince. You, gentlewoman,-

Doll. What says your grace?

Falstaff. His grace says that which his flesh rebels against.

[Knocking within.

310

Hostess. Who knocks so loud at door?—Look to the door there, Fiancis.

Enter Peto

Prince Peto, how now! what news?

Peto. The king your father is at Westminster,
And there are twenty weak and wearied posts
Come from the north: and, as I came along,
I met and overtook a dozen captains,
Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns,
And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.

Prince. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame, So idly to profane the precious time, When tempest of commotion, like the south Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.

Give me my sword and cloak.—Falstaff, good night

[Exeunt Prince Henry, Poins, Peto, and Bardolph.

Falstaff. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence and leave it unpicked.—[Knocking within] More knocking at the door!—

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

How now! what 's the matter?

Bardolph. You must away to court, sir, presently, A dozen captains stay at door for you.

Falstaff. [To the Page] Pay the musicians, sirrah.—Farewell, hostess;—farewell, Doll. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after, the undeserved may sleep, when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches; if I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go. •

Doll. I cannot speak; if my heart be not ready to burst,—well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself.

Falstaff. Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt Falstaff and Bardolph.

Hostess. Well, fare thee well. I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peascod-time, but an honester and truer-hearted man,—well, fare thee well.

Bardolph [Within] Mistress Tearsheet!

Hostess. What 's the matter?

Bardolph. [Within] Bid Mistress Tearsheet come to my master.

Hostess. O, run, Doll, run, run, good Doll: come. [She comes blubbered.] Yea, will you come, Doll? [Exeunt

ACT III.

Scene I. Westminster. The Palace. Enter the King in his nightgown, with a Page.

King. Go call the Earls of Surrey and of Warwick,
But, ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters,
And well consider of them Make good speed. [Exit Page.
How many thousand of my poorest subjects
Are at this hour asleep!—O sleep, O gentle sleep,
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down
And steep my senses in forgetfulness?
Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee
And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber,
Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great,
Under the canopies of costly state,
And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody?

O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch A watch-case or a common larum-bell? Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains In cradle of the rude imperious surge And in the visitation of the winds, Who take the ruffian billows by the top. Curling their monstrous heads and hanging them With deafening clamour in the slippery clouds, That with the hurly death itself awakes? Canst thou, O partial sleep, give thy repose To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude, And in the calmest and most stillest night, With all appliances and means to boot, Deny it to a king? Then happy low, lie down! Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown

Enter WARWICK and SURREY.

Warwick Many good morrows to your majesty!

King Is it good morrow, lords?

Warwick. 'T is one o'clock, and past

King. Why, then, good morrow to you all, my lords.

Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you?

Warwick. We have, my liege.

King. Then you perceive the body of our kingdom How foul it is; what rank diseases grow, And with what danger, near the heart of it.

Warwick. It is but as a body yet distemper'd, Which to his former strength may be restor'd With good advice and little medicine.

My Lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd.

King O God! that one might read the book of fate, And see the revolution of the times Make mountains level, and the continent,

80

Weary of solid firmness, melt itself Into the sea! and, other times, to see The beachy girdle of the ocean Too wide for Neptune's hips, how chances mock, And changes fill the cup of alteration With divers liquors! O, if this were seen, The happiest youth, viewing his progress through, What perils past, what crosses to ensue, Would shut the book, and sit him down and die. 'T is not ten years gone Since Richard and Northumberland, great friends, Did feast together, and in two years after Were they at wars, it is but eight years since This Percy was the man nearest my soul, Who like a brother toil'd in my affairs And laid his love and life under my foot, Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard Gave him defiance. But which of you was by-You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember—[To Warwick] When Richard, with his eye brimful of tears. Then check'd and rated by Northumberland, Did speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy? 'Northumberland, thou ladder by the which My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne.'— Though then, God knows, I had no such intent, But that necessity so bow'd the state That I and greatness were compell'd to kiss 'The time shall come,' thus did he follow it, 'The time will come, that foul sin, gathering head, Shall break into corruption,'-so went on, Foretelling this same time's condition And the division of our amity.

Warwick. There is a history in all men's lives, Figuring the nature of the times deceas'd; The which observ'd, a man may prophesy,

With a near aim, of the main chance of things As yet not come to life, which in their seeds And weak beginnings lie intreasured Such things become the hatch and brood of time, And by the necessary form of this King Richard might create a perfect guess That great Northumberland, then false to him, Would of that seed grow to a greater falseness, Which should not find a ground to root upon, Unless on you.

King Are these things then necessities? Then let us meet them like necessities, And that same word even now cries out on us. They say the bishop and Northumberland Are fifty thousand strong.

Warwick. It cannot be, my lord, Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo, The numbers of the fear'd —Please it your grace To go to bed. Upon my soul, my lord, The powers that you already have sent forth Shall bring this prize in very easily. To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd A certain instance that Glendower is dead Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill, And these unseason'd hours perforce must add Unto your sickness.

King. I will take your counsel, And were these inward wars once out of hand, We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land.

[Exeunt.

Scene II. Gloucestershire. Before Justice Shallow's House Enter Shallow and Silence, meeting, Mouldy, Shadow, Wart, Feeble, Bullcalf, and Servants with them.

Shallow Come on, come on, come on, sir, give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sii an early stirrer, by the rood! And how doth my good cousin Silence?

Silence. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shallow And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow? and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen?

Silence. Alas, a black ousel, cousin Shallow!

Shallow. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar, he is at Oxford still, is he not?

Silence. Indeed, sir, to my cost.

Shallow He must, then, to the inns o' court shortly. I was once of Clement's Inn, where I think they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Silence. You were called lusty Shallow then, cousin.

Shallow. By the mass, I was called any thing; and I would have done any thing indeed too, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Barnes, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele, a Cotswold man; you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the inns o' court again. Then was Jack Falstaff, now Sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.

Silence This Sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shallow The same Sir John, the very same. I saw him break Skogan's head at the court-gate, when a' was a crack not thus high; and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's Inn. Jesu, Jesu, the mad days that I have spent! and to see how many of my old acquaintance are dead!

Silence. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shallow. Certain, 't is certain, very sure, very sure death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Silence. By my troth, I was not there.

Shallow. Death is certain. Is old Double of your town living yet?

Silence. Dead, sir.

Shallow. Jesu, Jesu, dead! a' drew a good bow; and dead! a' shot a fine shoot: John o' Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead! a' would have clapped i' the clout at twelve score; and carried you a forehand shaft at fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see. How a score of ewes now? 43

Silence. Thereafter as they be; a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shallow. And is old Double dead?

Silence. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Enter Bardolph and one with him.

Bardolph. Good morrow, honest gentlemen. I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow? 50

Shallow I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace. What is your good pleasure with me?

Bardolph. My captain, sir, commends him to you; my captain, Sir John Falstaff, a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shallow. He greets me well, sir. I knew him a good backsword man. How doth the good knight? may I ask how my lady his wife doth?

Bardolph. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife.

Shallow. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated! it is good; yea, indeed, is it: good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated! it comes of accommodo. very good, a good phrase.

Bardolph. Pardon me, sir, I have heard the word Phrase call you it? by this good day, I know not the phrase, but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldiei-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated, that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated, or when a man is, being, whereby a' may be thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing.

Shallow It is very just -

Enter FALSTAFF.

Look, here comes good Sir John.—Give me your good hand, give me your woiship's good hand. By my troth, you look well and bear your years very well, welcome, good Sir John.

Falstaff. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow.—Master Surecard, as I think?

Shallow. No, Sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Falstaff. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Silence. Your good worship is welcome

Falstaff. Fie! this is hot weather, gentlemen.—Have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men?

Shallow. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Falstaff. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shallow. Where's the roll? where's the roll? where's the roll? Let me see, let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so, so, so, so; yea, marry, sir.—Ralph Mouldy!—Let them appear as I call, let them do so, let them do so.—Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Mouldy. Here, an 't please you.

Shallow. What think you, Sir John? a good-limbed fellow, young, strong, and of good friends.

Falstaff. Is thy name Mouldy?

Mouldy. Yea, an't please you.

Falstaff 'T is the more time thou wert used.

Shallow. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, 1' faith! things that are mouldy lack use; very singular good!—In faith, well said, Sir John, very well said.

Falstaff. Prick him

Mouldy. I was pricked well enough before, an you could have let me alone, my old dame will be undone now for one to do her husbandry and her drudgery. You need not to have pricked me; there are other men fitter to go out than I.

Falstaff Go to, peace, Mouldy! you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Mouldy. Spent!

110

Shallow Peace, fellow, peace! stand aside, know you where you are?—For the other, Sir John, let me see.—Simon Shadow!

Falstaff. Yea, marry, let me have him to sit under, he's like to be a cold soldier.

Shallow. Where's Shadow?

Shadow. Here, sir.

Falstaff. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shadow. My mother's son, sir.

119

Falstaff. Thy mother's son! like enough, and thy father's shadow; so the son of the female is the shadow of the male. It is often so, indeed; but much of the father's substance!

Shallow. Do you like him, Sir John?

Falstaff Shadow will serve for summer; prick him, for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book.

Shallow. Thomas Wart!

Falstaff. Where's he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Falstaff. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Falstaff. Thou art a very ragged wart.

130

Shallow. Shall I prick him down, Sir John?

Falstaff. It were superfluous, for his apparel is built upon his back and the whole frame stands upon pins prick him no more.

Shallow. Ha, ha, ha! you can do it, sir, you can do it; I commend you well.—Francis Feeble!

t6o

Feeble. Here, sır.

Falstaff What trade art thou, Feeble?

Feeble. A woman's tailor, sir.

Shallow. Shall I prick him, sir?

Falstaff You may, but if he had been a man's tailor, he'd ha' pricked you —Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat?

Feeble. I will do my good will, sir; you can have no more.
Falstaff. Well said, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mouse—Prick the woman's tailor well, Master Shallow; deep, Master Shallow.

Feeble. I would Wait might have gone, sir.

Falstaff. I would thou wert a man's tailor, that thou mightst mend him and make him fit to go.—I cannot put him to a private soldier that is the leader of so many thousands; let that suffice, most forcible Feeble.

Feeble. It shall suffice, sir.

Falstaff. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble.—Who is next?

Shallow. Peter Bullcalf o' the green!

Falstaff Yea, marry, let's see Bullcalf.

Bullcalf. Here, sir.

Falstaff. Fore God, a likely fellow!—Come, prick me Bullcalf till he roar again.

Bullcalf. O Lord! good my lord captain,-

Falstaff. What, dost thou roar before thou art pricked?

Bullcalf. O Lord, sir! I am a diseased man.

Falstaff. What disease hast thou?

Bullcalf. A whoreson cold, sir, a cough, sir, which I caught with ringing in the king's affairs upon his coronation-day, sir.

Falstaff. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown; we will have away thy cold, and I will take such order that thy friends shall ring for thee—Is here all?

Shallow. Here is two more called than your number, you must have but four here, sir. and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner.

Falstaff. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by my troth, Master Shallow.

Shallow. O, Sir John, do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's field?

Falstaff. No more of that, good Master Shallow, no more of that.

Shallow. Ha! 't was a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive?

Falstaff. She lives, Master Shallow.

Shallow She never could away with me.

Falstaff. Never, never; she would always say she could not abide Master Shallow.

Shallow By the mass, I could anger her to the heart Doth she hold her own well?

Falstaff. Old, old, Master Shallow.

Shallow. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old, certain she's old; and had Robin Nightwork by old Nightwork before I came to Clement's Inn.

Silence. That's fifty-five year ago.

Shallow. Ha, cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that that this knight and I have seen !—Ha, Sir John, said I well? Falstaff. We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow.

Shallow. That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, Sir John, we have: our watchword was 'Hem, boys!—

Come, let 's to dinner; come, let 's to dinner—Jesu, the days that we have seen !—Come, come [Exeunt Falstaff and the Justices.

Bullcalf. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend; and here's four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as hef be hanged, sir, as go and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather, because I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends, else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much.

Bardolph. Go to; stand aside

Mouldy. And, good master corporal captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend. she has nobody to do any thing about her when I am gone, and she is old, and cannot help herself You shall have forty, sir.

Bardolph. Go to; stand aside.

Feeble. By my troth, I care not, a man can die but once. we owe God a death. I'll ne'er bear a base mind an 't be my destiny, so, an 't be not, so. No man is too good to serve's prince; and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.

Bardolph. Well said; thou'rt a good fellow.

Feeble. Faith, I'll bear no base mind.

Re-enter Falstaff and the Justices.

Falstaff. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shallow. Four of which you please.

Bardolph. Sir, a word with you —I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bullcalf.

Falstaff. Go to; well.

Shallow. Come, Sir John, which four will you have?

Falstaff. Do you choose for me

Shallow. Marry, then, Mouldy, Bullcalf, Feeble, and Shadow.

Falstaff. Mouldy and Bullcalf .-- For you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service,—and for your part, Bullcalf, grow till you come unto it · I will none of you.

Shallow. Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong; they are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best.

Falstaff Will you tell me, Master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thews, the statuie, bulk, and big assemblance of a man! Give me the spirit, Master Shallow.—Here's Wart, you see what a ragged appearance it is: a' shall charge you and discharge you with the motion of a pewterer's hammer, come off and on swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket —And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow, give me this man he presents no mark to the enemy, the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife And for a retreat,—how swiftly will this Feeble the woman's tailor run off! O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones.—Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

Bardolph. Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus.

Falstaff Come, manage me your calver. So. very well, go to, very good, exceeding good O, give me always a little, lean, old, chopt, bald shot —Well said, i' faith, Wart, thou 'rt a good scab hold, there 's a tester for thee.

Shallow. He is not his craft's master; he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end Gieen, when I lay at Clement's Inn,—I was then Sir Dagonet in Arthur's show,—there was a little quiver fellow, and a' would manage you his piece thus; and a' would about and about, and come you in and come you in: 'rah, tah, tah,' would a' say, 'bounce' would a' say; and away again would a' go, and again would a' come.

—I shall ne'er see such a fellow.

Falstaff These fellows will do well, Master Shallow.—Farewell, Master Silence, I will not use many words with you.—Fare you well, gentlemen both: I thank you, I must a dozen mile to-night.—Bardolph, give the soldiers coats.

Shallow. Sir John, the Loid bless you! God prosper your affairs! God send us peace! At your return visit our house, let our old acquaintance be renewed. peradventure I will with ye to the court

Falstaff. Fore God, I would you would, Master Shallow. Shallow. Go to, I have spoke at a word. God keep you. Falstaff. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. [Exeunt Justues.]-On, Bardolph, lead the men away. [Exeunt Bardolph, Recruits, &c] As I return, I will fetch off these justices; I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow. Lord, Lord, how subject we old men are to this vice of lying! This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth, and the feats he hath done about Turnbull Street, and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's Inn like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring: when a' was naked, he was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife; a' was so forlorn that his dimensions to any thick sight were invincible; a' was the very genius of famine. A' came ever in the rearward of the fashion, and sung those tunes that he heard the carmen whistle, and sware they were his fancies or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire, and talks as familiarly of John o' Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I 'll be sworn a' ne'er saw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he burst his head for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it, and told John o' Gaunt he beat his own name; for you might have thrust him and all his apparel into an eel-skin; the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court: and now has he land and beefs. Well, I'll be acquainted with him, if I return; and it shall go hard but I will make him a philosopher's two stones to me. If the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end.

GAULTREE FOREST.

ACT IV.

Scene I. Yorkshire Gaultree Forest

Enter the Archeishop of York, Moweray, Hastings, and others.

Archbishop. What is this forest call'd?

Hastings. 'T is Gaultree Forest, an 't shall please your grace.

Archbishop. Here stand, my lords, and send discoverers forth

To know the numbers of our enemies.

Hastings. We have sent forth already.

Archbishop.

To seell done—

My friends and brethren in these great affairs,
I must acquaint you that I have received

New-dated letters from Northumberland,
Their cold intent, tenour and substance, thus
Here doth he wish his person, with such powers

As might hold sortance with his quality,
The which he could not levy; whereupon
He is retired, to ripe his growing fortunes,
To Scotland and concludes in hearty prayers
That your attempts may overlive the hazard
And fearful meeting of their opposite

Mowbray. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch ground,

And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hastings. Now, what news?

Messenger. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile,
In goodly form comes on the enemy,
And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number
Upon or near the rate of thirty thousand.

Mowbray The just proportion that we gave them out
Let us sway on and face them in the field.

Archbishop What well-appointed leader fronts us here?

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Mowbray. I think it is my Lord of Westmoreland.

Westmoreland. Health and fair greeting from our general,
The prince, Lord John and Duke of Lancaster.

Archbishop Say on, my Lord of Westmoreland, in peace.
What doth concern your coming?

Westmoreland.
Then, my, lord,

Unto your grace do I in chief address

The substance of my speech If that rebellion Came like itself, in base and abject routs, Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags, And countenanc'd by boys and beggary,-I say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd, In his true, native, and most proper shape, You, reverend father, and these noble lords Had not been here, to dress the ugly form Of base and bloody insurrection With your fair honours.-You, lord archbishop, Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd, Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd, Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd, Whose white investments figure innocence, The dove and very blessed spirit of peace, Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself Out of the speech of peace that bears such grace, Into the harsh and boisterous tongue of war, Turning your books to greaves, your ink to blood, 50 Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine To a loud trumpet and a point of war? Archbishop. Wherefore do I this? so the question stands. Briefly to this end we are all diseas'd, And with our surfeiting and wanton hours Have brought ourselves into a burning fever, And we must bleed for it, of which disease Our late king, Richard, being infected, died. But, my most noble Lord of Westmoreland,

And we must bleed for it, of which disease
Our late king, Richard, being infected, died.
But, my most noble Lord of Westmoreland,
I take not on me here as a physician,
Nor do I as an enemy to peace
Troop in the throngs of military men,
But rather show awhile like fearful war,
To diet rank minds sick of happiness
And purge the obstructions which begin to stop
Our very veins of life Hear me more plainly.

I have in equal balance justly weigh'd What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we suffer, And find our griefs heavier than our offences. We see which way the stream of time doth run, And are enforc'd from our most quiet sphere By the rough torrent of occasion, And have the summary of all our griefs, When time shall serve, to show in articles, Which long ere this we offer'd to the king, And might by no suit gain our audience. When we are wrong'd and would unfold our griefs, We are denied access unto his person Even by those men that most have done us wrong. The dangers of the days but newly gone, Whose memory is written on the earth With yet appearing blood, and the examples Of every minute's instance, present now, Hath put us in these ill-beseeming aims, Not to break peace or any branch of it, But to establish here a peace indeed, Concurring both in name and quality.

Westmoreland. When ever yet was your appeal denied? Wherein have you been galled by the king? What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on you, That you should seal this lawless bloody book Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?

Archbishop. My brother general, the commonwealth, To brother born an household cruelty, I make my quarrel in particular.

Westmoreland. There is no need of any such redress; Or if there were, it not belongs to you
Mowbray. Why not to him in part, and to us all

That feel the bruises of the days before, And suffer the condition of these times

To lay a heavy and unequal hand Upon our honours?

O, my good Lord Mowbray, Westmoreland. Constitue the times to their necessities, And you shall say indeed, it is the time, And not the king, that doth you injuries. Yet for your part, it not appears to me, Either from the king or in the present time, That you should have an inch of any ground To build a grief on. Were you not restor'd To all the Duke of Norfolk's signories,

Your noble and right well remember'd father's?

Mowbray. What thing, in honour, had my father lost, That need to be reviv'd and breath'd in me? The king that lov'd him, as the state stood then, Was force perforce compell'd to banish him; And then that Henry Bolingbroke and he, Being mounted and both roused in their seats. Their neighing coursers daring of the spur, Their armed staves in charge, their beavers down. Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel, And the loud trumpet blowing them together, Then, then, when there was nothing could have stay'd My father from the breast of Bolingbroke,-O, when the king did throw his warder down, His own life hung upon the staff he threw: Then threw he down himself and all their lives That by indictment and by dint of sword Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.

Westmoreland. You speak, Lord Mowbray, now you know not what. 130

The Earl of Hereford was reputed then In England the most valiant gentleman. Who knows on whom fortune would then have smil'd? But if your father had been victor there,

150

He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry
For all the country in a general voice
Cried hate upon him, and all their prayers and love
Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on
And bless'd and grac'd indeed, more than the king
But this is mere digression from my purpose.
Here come I from our princely general
To know your griefs, to tell you from his grace
That he will give you audience; and wherein
It shall appear that your demands are just,
You shall enjoy them, every thing set off
That might so much as think you enemies.

Mowbray But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer, And it proceeds from policy, not love.

Westmoreland Mowbray, you overween to take it so This offer comes from mercy, not from fear; For, lo! within a ken our army lies, Upon mine honour, all too confident To give admittance to a thought of fear. Our battle is more full of names than yours, Our men more perfect in the use of arms, Our armour all as strong, our cause the best; Then reason will our hearts should be as good: Say you not then our offer is compell'd.

Mossibray Well by my will we shall admit no perlow

Mowbray. Well, by my will we shall admit no parley.

Westmoreland That argues but the shame of your offence, rotten case abudes no handling.

A rotten case abides no handling

Hastings. Hath the Prince John a full commission, In very ample virtue of his father,
To hear and absolutely to determine
Of what conditions we shall stand upon?
Westmoreland That is intended in the general's name,

I muse you make so slight a question.

Archbishop. Then take, my Lord of Westmoreland, this schedule,

For this contains our general grievances
Each several article herein redress'd,
All members of our cause, both here and hence,
That are insinewed to this action,
Acquitted by a true substantial form
And present execution of our wills
To us and to our purposes confin'd,
We come within our awful banks again,
And knit our powers to the arm of peace.

Westmoreland. This will I show the general. Please you, lords.

In sight of both our battles we may meet; And either end in peace, which God so frame! Or to the place of difference call the swords Which must decide it.

Archbishop.

My lord, we will do so.

Exit Westmoreland.

Mowbray. There is a thing within my bosom tells me That no conditions of our peace can stand.

Hastings Fear you not that; if we can make our peace Upon such large terms and so absolute As our conditions shall consist upon, Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.

Mowbray. Yea, but our valuation shall be such That every slight and false-derived cause, Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason Shall to the king taste of this action; That, were our royal faiths martyrs in love, We shall be winnowed with so rough a wind That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff And good from bad find no partition.

Archbishop. No, no, my lord. Note this: the king is weary Of dainty and such picking grievances, For he hath found to end one doubt by death Revives two greater in the heirs of life,

And therefore will he wipe his tables clean, And keep no tell-tale to his memory That may repeat and history his loss To new remembrance, for full well he knows He cannot so precisely weed this land As his misdoubts present occasion. His foes are so enrooted with his friends That, plucking to unfix an enemy, He doth unfasten so and shake a friend; So that this land, like an offensive wife That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes, As he is striking, holds his infant up, And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm That was uplear'd to execution

Hastings Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods On late offenders, that he now doth lack The very instruments of chastisement, So that his power, like to a fangless lion, May offer, but not hold.

Archbishop. 'T is very true, And therefore be assur'd, my good lord marshal. If we do now make our atonement well, Our peace will, like a broken limb united, Grow stronger for the breaking.

Be it so.

Mowbray. Here is return'd my Lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Westmoreland The prince is here at hand; pleaseth your lordship

To meet his grace just distance 'tween our armies? Mowbray. Your grace of York, in God's name, then, set forward.

Archbishop. Before, and greet his grace; my lord, we come. Exeunt.

Scene II. Another Part of the Forest

Enter, from one side, Mowbray, the Archbishop, Hastings, and others from the other side, Prince John of Lancaster and Westmoreland; Officers, and others with them.

Lancaster You are well encounter'd here, my cousin Mowbray.—

Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop,-And so to you, Lord Hastings,-and to all.-My Lord of York, it better show'd with you When that your flock, assembled by the bell, Encircled you to hear with reverence Your exposition on the holy text, Than now to see you here an iron man, Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum. Turning the word to sword and life to death. That man that sits within a monarch's heart. And ripens in the sunshine of his favour, Would he abuse the countenance of the king. Alack, what mischiefs might he set abroach In shadow of such greatness! With you, lord bishop, It is even so Who hath not heard it spoken How deep you were within the books of God? To us the speaker in his parliament, To us the imagin'd voice of God himself, The very opener and intelligencer Between the grace, the sanctities, of heaven And our dull workings. O, who shall believe But you misuse the reverence of your place. Employ the countenance and grace of heaven, As a false favourite doth his prince's name, In deeds dishonourable? You have ta'en up, Under the counterfeited zeal of God, The subjects of his substitute, my father,

And both against the peace of heaven and him Have here up-swarm'd them.

Archbishop. Good my Lord of Lancaster, I am not here against your father's peace;
But, as I told my Lord of Westmoreland,
The time misorder'd doth, in common sense,
Crowd us and crush us to this monstrous form,
To hold our safety up. I sent your grace
The parcels and particulars of our grief,
The which hath been with scorn shov'd from the court,
Whereon this Hydra son of war is born;
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep
With grant of our most just and right desires,
And true obedience, of this madness cur'd,
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowbiay. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes To the last man.

Hastings. And though we here fall down, We have supplies to second our attempt: If they miscarry, theirs shall second them; And so success of mischief shall be born, And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up Whiles England shall have generation.

Lancaster. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow,

To sound the bottom of the after-times.

Westmoreland. Pleaseth your grace to answer them directly How far forth you do like their articles.

Lancaster. I like them all, and do allow them well, And swear here, by the honour of my blood, My father's purposes have been mistook, And some about him have too lavishly Wrested his meaning and authority.—

My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd; Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please you, Discharge your powers unto their several counties, As we will ours, and here between the armies Let's drink together friendly and embrace, That all their eyes may bear those tokens home Of our restored love and amity.

Archbishop I take your princely word for these redresses.

Lancaster. I give it you, and will maintain my word,

And thereupon I drink unto your grace

Hastings. Go, captain, and deliver to the army This news of peace, let them have pay, and part: I know it will well please them. Hie thee, captain.

Exit Officer.

80

Archbishop. To you, my noble Lord of Westmoreland. Westmoreland. I pledge your grace, and, if you knew what pains

I have bestow'd to breed this present peace, You would drink freely. but my love to ye Shall show itself more openly hereafter.

Archbishop. I do not doubt you.

Westmoreland. I am glad of it.—

Health to my lord and gentle cousin, Mowbray.

Mowbray. You wish me health in very happy season;

For I am, on the sudden, something ill.

Archbishop. Against ill chances men are ever merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good event

Westmoreland. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow

Serves to say thus,—some good thing comes to-morrow.

Archbishop. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit

Mowbray. So much the worse, if your own rule be true.

[Shouts within

Lancaster. The word of peace is render'd; hark, how they shout!

Mowbray. This had been cheerful after victory.

Archbishop. A peace is of the nature of a conquest;

For then both parties nobly are subdued, And neither party loser.

Lancaster. Go, my loid,

And let our army be discharged too.— [Exit Westmoreland. And, good my lord, so please you, let our trains March by us, that we may peruse the men

We should have cop'd withal

Archbishop. Go, good Lord Hastings,

And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march by.

[Exit Hastings.

100

110

Lancaster. I trust, lords, we shall lie to-night together .-

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Now cousin, wherefore stands our army still?

Westmoreland The leaders, having charge from you to stand,

Will not go off until they hear you speak.

Lancaster They know their duties.

Re-enter Hastings.

Hastings My loid, our army is dispers'd already.

Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses

East, west, north, south, or, like a school broke up,

Each huiries toward his home and sporting-place

Westmoreland Good tidings, my Lord Hastings, for the

I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason. And you, lord archbishop, and you, Lord Mowbray, Of capital treason I attach you both Mowbray. Is this proceeding just and honourable? Westmoreland. Is your assembly so? Archbishop Will you thus break your faith?

Lancaster. I pawn'd thee none.

I promis'd you redress of these same grievances Whereof you did complain; which, by mine honour,

I will perform with a most Christian care. But for you, rebels, look to taste the due Meet for rebellion and such acts as yours. Most shallowly did you these arms commence, Fondly brought here and foolishly sent hence.— Strike up our drums, pursue the scatter'd stray, God, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.— Some guard these traitors to the block of death, Treason's true bed and yielder up of breath.

Exeunt.

Scene III Another Part of the Forest.

Alarum. Excursions Enter Falstaff and Colevile, meeting

Falstaff. What 's your name, sir? of what condition are you, and of what place, I pray?

Colevile. I am a knight, sir, and my name is Colevile of the Dale.

Falstaff. Well, then, Colevile is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the dale Colevile shall be still your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place, a place deep enough; so shall you be still Colevile of the dale.

Colerule Are not you Sir John Falstaff?

Falstaff. As good a man as he, sir, whoe'er I am. Do ye yield, sir? or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death; therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Colevile. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Falstaff. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe; my womb, my womb, my womb undoes me.—Here comes our general.

Enter Prince John of Lancaster, Westmoreland, Blunt, and others.

Lancaster. The heat is past; follow no further now.—
Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland.—
23
[Exit Westmoreland.

Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while? When every thing is ended, then you come. These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life, One time or other break some gallows' back.

Falstaff. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus; I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility: I have foundered nine score and odd posts; and here, travel-tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Colevile of the Dale, a most furious knight and valorous enemy. But what of that? he saw me, and yielded; that I may justly say, with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome, I came, saw, and overcame.

Lancaster. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

Falstaff. I know not, here he is, and here I yield him: and I beseech your grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds, or, by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top on 't, Colevile kissing my foot. To the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt two-pences to me, and I in the clear sky of fame o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble. Therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

Lancaster. Thine's too heavy to mount. Falstaff. Let it shine, then.

Lancaster. Thine's too thick to shine.

Falstaff. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

Lancaster. Is thy name Colevile?

Colevile. It is, my lord

Lancaster. A famous rebel ait thou, Colevile.

Falstaff. And a famous true subject took him.

Colevile. I am, my lord, but as my betters are

That led me hither: had they been rul'd by me,

You should have won them dearer than you have.

Falstaff. I know not how they sold themselves, but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis, and I thank thee for thee.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Lancaster. Now, have you left pursuit?

Westmoreland. Retreat is made and execution stay'd.

Lancaster. Send Colevile with his confederates

To York, to present execution.-

Blunt, lead him hence, and see you guard him sure.— 70 [Exeunt Blunt and others with Colevile.

Exeunt Blant and others wi

And now dispatch we toward the court, my lords.

I hear the king my father is sore sick,

Our news shall go before us to his majesty,— Which, cousin, you shall bear to comfort him,

And we with sober speed will follow you.

Falstaff. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go through Gloucestershire; and, when you come to court, stand my good lord, pray, in your good report.

Lancaster. Fare you well, Falstaff; I, in my condition,

Shall better speak of you than you deserve.

[Exeunt all but Falstaff.

Falstaff. I would you had but the wit, 't were better than your dukedom. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh: but that 's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There 's never none of these demure boys come to any proof, for thin drink doth so over-cool then blood, and making many fish-meals. that they are generally fools and cowards; which some of us should be too, but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it It ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish and dull and crudy vapours which environ it, makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes, which, delivered o'er to the voice, the tongue, which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is the warming of the blood, which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice; but the sherris warms it and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme. illumineth the face, which as a beacon gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners and inland petty spirits muster me all to their captain, the heart, who, great and puffed up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage, and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack. for that sets it a-work, and learning a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil, till sack commences it and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it that Prince Harry is valuant; for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and tilled with excellent endeavour of drinking good and good store of fertile sherris, that he is become very hot and valiant. had a thousand sons, the first humane principle I would teach them should be to forswear thin potations and to addict themselves to sack .-114

Enter BARDOLPH.

How now, Bardolph?

Bardolph. The army is discharged all and gone.
Falstaff Let them go. I'll through Gloucestershire; and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, esquire. I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. [Exeunt.

īΩ

Scene IV. Westminster. The Jerusalem Chamber.

Enter the King, the Princes Thomas of Clarence and Humphrey of Gloucester, Warwick, and others

King. Now, lords, if God doth give successful end To this debate that bleedeth at our doors, We will our youth lead on to higher fields And draw no swords but what are sanctified. Our navy is address'd, our power collected, Our substitutes in absence well invested, And every thing lies level to our wish, Only, we want a little personal strength, And pause us, till these rebels, now afoot, Come underneath the yoke of government.

Warwick. Both which we doubt not but your majesty Shall soon enjoy.

King Humphrey, my son of Gloucester, Where is the prince your brother?

Gloucester. I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

King. And how accompanied?

Gloucester. I do not know, my lord.

King. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him? Gloucester No, my good lord; he is in presence here.

Clarence. What would my lord and father?

King Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence. How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother? He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas. Thou hast a better place in his affection Than all thy brothers, cherish it, my boy, And noble offices thou mayst effect Of mediation, after I am dead,

Between his greatness and thy other biethren. Therefore omit him not; blunt not his love, Nor lose the good advantage of his grace By seeming cold or careless of his will, For he is gracious, if he be observ'd. He hath a tear for pity and a hand Open as day for melting charity; Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, he 's flint, As humorous as winter, and as sudden As flaws congealed in the spring of day. His temper, therefore, must be well observ'd. Chide him for faults, and do it reverently, When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth; But, being moody, give him line and scope, Till that his passions, like a whale on ground, Confound themselves with working. Learn this, Thomas, And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends. A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in, That the united vessel of their blood; "; Mingled with venom of suggestion-As, force perforce, the age will pour it in-Shall never leak, though it do work as strong As aconitum or rash gunpowder Clarence. I shall observe him with all care and love. King. Why art thou not at Windsor with him, Thomas? Clarence. He is not there to-day, he dines in London. King. And how accompanied? canst thou tell that? Clarence. With Poins, and other his continual followers. King. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds. And he, the noble image of my youth, Is overspread with them; therefore my grief Stretches itself beyond the hour of death The blood weeps from my heart when I do shape

In forms imaginary the unguided days
And rotten times that you shall look upon

When I am sleeping with my ancestors. For when his headstrong riot hath no curb, When rage and hot blood are his counsellors, When means and lavish manners meet together, O, with what wings shall his affections fly Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay!

Warwick My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite. The prince but studies his companions
Like a strange tongue, wherein, to gain the language,
'T is needful that the most immodest word
Be look'd upon and learn'd; which once attain'd,
Your highness knows, comes to no further use
But to be known and hated. So, like gross terms,
The prince will in the perfectness of time
Cast off his followers; and their memory
Shall as a pattern or a measure live,
By which his grace must mete the lives of others,
Turning past evils to advantages.

King. 'T is seldom when the bee doth leave her comb In the dead carrion.—

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Who 's here? Westmoreland! & Westmoreland. Health to my sovereign, and new happiness

Added to that that I am to deliver!
Prince John your son doth kiss your grace's hand;
Mowbray, the Bishop Scroop, Hastings, and all
Are brought to the correction of your law.
There is not now a rebel's sword unsheath'd,
But Peace puts forth her olive everywhere.
The manner how this action hath been borne
Here at more leisure may your highness read,
With every course in his particular.

King. O Westmoreland, thou art a summer bird,

Which ever in the haunch of winter sings. The lifting up of day.—

Enter HARCOURT.

Look, here's more news.

120

Harcourt. From enemies heaven keep your majesty; And, when they stand against you, may they fall As those that I am come to tell you of! The Earl Northumberland and the Lord Bardolph, With a great power of English and of Scots, Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown. The manner and true order of the fight This packet, please it you, contains at large.

Eight And wherefore should these good news make.

King And wherefore should these good news make me sick?

Will Fortune never come with both hands full, But write her fair words still in foulest letters? She either gives a stomach and no food,—
Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast And takes away the stomach,—such are the rich, That have abundance and enjoy it not.

I should rejoice now at this happy news;
And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy.—
O me! come near me, now I am much ill.

Gloucester. Comfort, your majesty!

Clarence O my royal father!

Westmoreland. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself, look up.

Warwick. Be patient, princes, you do know, these fits Are with his highness very ordinary.

Stand from him, give him air; he'll straight be well.

Clarence. No, no, he cannot long hold out these pangs. The incessant care and labour of his mind Hath wrought the mure that should confine it in So thin that life looks through and will break out.

Gloucester. The people fear me, for they do observe Unfather'd heirs and loathly births of nature. The seasons change their manners, as the year Had found some months asleep and leap'd them over.

Clarence. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between, And the old folk, time 's dotting chronicles, Say it did so a little time before

That our great-grandsire, Edward, sick'd and died.

Warwick. Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers.

Gloucester. This apoplexy will certain be his end.

King. I pray you, take me up, and bear me hence Into some other chamber; softly, pray. [Excunt Scene V. Another Chamber.

The King lying on a bed: Clarence, Gloucester, Warwick, and others in attendance.

King. Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends; Unless some dull and favourable hand Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

Warwick. Call for the music in the other room.

King. Set me the crown upon my pillow here.

Clarence His eye is hollow, and he changes much.

Warwick. Less noise, less noise!

Enter PRINCE HENRY.

Prince. Who saw the Duke of Clarence? Clarence I am here, brother, full of heaviness.

Prince. How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!

How doth the king?

Gloucester Exceeding ill

Prince. Heard he the good news yet? Tell it him.

Gloucester. He alter'd much upon the hearing it. Prince. If he be sick with joy, he will recover Without physic. Warwick. Not so much noise, my lords.—Sweet prince, speak low;

The king your father is dispos'd to sleep

Clarence. Let us withdraw into the other room.

Warwick Will't please your grace to go along with us?

Prince. No; I will sit and watch here by the king—

[Execute all but the Prince.]

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow, Being so troublesome a bedfellow? O polish'd perturbation! golden care! That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide To many a watchful night! sleep with it now! Yet not so sound and half so deeply sweet As he whose brow with homely biggen bound Snores out the watch of night. O majesty! When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit Like a rich armour worn in heat of day, 30 That scalds with safety. By his gates of breath There lies a downy feather which stirs not; Did he suspire, that light and weightless down Perforce must move.—My gracious lord my father!— This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep That from this golden rigol hath divorc'd So many English kings. Thy due from me Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood, Which nature, love, and filial tenderness Shall, O dear father, pay thee plenteously, 40 My due from thee is this imperial crown, Which, as immediate from thy place and blood, Derives itself to me. Lo, here it sits, Which God shall guard; and put the world's whole strength Into one giant arm, it shall not force This lineal honour from me; this from thee Exit. Will I to mine leave, as't is left to me. King. Warwick! Gloucester! Clarence!

We bring it to the hive, and, like the bees, Are murthered for our pains This bitter taste Yield his engrossments to the ending father —

Re-enter WARWICK

Now, where is he that will not stay so long Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me?

Warwick My lord, I found the prince in the next 100m, Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks, With such a deep demeanour in great solrow That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood, Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither King But wherefore did he take away the crown?

Re-enter PRINCE HENRY

Lo, where he comes —Come hither to me, Harry.— Depart the chamber; leave us here alone [Exeunt Warwick and the rest.

Prince. I never thought to hear you speak again. King Thy wish was father, Hairy, to that thought, I stay too long by thee, I weary thee Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair That thou wilt needs invest thee with my honours Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth! Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity Is held from falling with so weak a wind That it will quickly drop my day is dim. Thou hast stolen that which after some few hours Were thine without offence, and at my death Thou hast seal'd up my expectation; Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not, And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts.

Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart, To stab at half an hour of my life. What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour? Then get thee gone and dig my grave thyself, And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear That thou art crowned, not that I am dead Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head. Only compound me with forgotten dust, Give that which gave thee life unto the worms. Pluck down my officers, break my decrees, For now a time is come to mock at form Hairy the Fifth is crown'd ! up, vanity! Down, royal state! all you sage counsellors, hence! And to the English court assemble now, From every region, apes of idleness! Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your scum! Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance, Revel the night, rob, murther, and commit The oldest sins the newest kind of ways? Be happy, he will trouble you no more; England shall double gild his treble guilt. England shall give him office, honour, might, For the fifth Harry from curb'd license plucks The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog Shall flesh his tooth on every innocent. O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows! When that my care could not withhold thy nots, What wilt thou do when riot is thy care? O, thou wilt be a wilderness again, Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants! Prince. O, pardon me, my liege! but for my tears,

The moist impediments unto my speech,
I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke
Ere you with grief had spoke and I had heard

The course of it so far. There is your crown, And He that wears the crown immortally Long guard it yours! If I affect it more Than as your honour and as your renown, Let me no more from this obedience rise. Which my most inward time and duteous spirit Teacheth, this prostrate and exterior bending. God witness with me, when I here came in, And found no course of breath within your majesty, How cold it struck my heart! If I do feign, O, let me in my present wildness die, And never live to show the incredulous would The noble change that I have purposed! Coming to look on you, thinking you dead, And dead almost, my liege, to think you were. I spake unto this crown as having sense. And thus upbraided it. 'The care on thee depending Hath fed upon the body of my father; Therefore, thou best of gold art worst of gold. Other, less fine in carat, is more precious, Preserving life in medicine potable, But thou, most fine, most honour'd, most renown'd. Hast eat thy bearer up.' Thus, my most royal liege, Accusing it, I put it on my head, To try with it, as with an enemy That had before my face murther'd my father, The quarrel of a true inheritor. But if it did infect my blood with joy, Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride, If any rebel or vain spirit of mine Did with the least affection of a welcome Give entertainment to the might of it. Let God for ever keep it from my head, And make me as the poolest vassal is That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!

King. O my son, God put it in thy mind to take it hence, That thou mightst win the more thy father's love, 180 Pleading so wisely in excuse of it! Come hither, Hairy, sit thou by my bed, And hear, I think, the very latest counsel That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son. By what by-paths and indirect crook'd ways I met this crown; and I myself know well How troublesome it sat upon my head To thee it shall descend with better quiet, Better opinion, better confirmation, For all the soil of the achievement goes 190 It seem'd in me With me into the earth But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand, And I had many living to upbraid My gain of it by their assistances, Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed, Wounding supposed peace. All these bold fears Thou see st with peril I have answered, For all my reign hath been but as a scene Acting that argument: and now my death Changes the mode; for what in me was purchas'd, 200 Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort; So thou the garland wear'st successively. Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do, Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green, And all my friends, which thou must make thy friends, Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out; By whose fell working I was first advanc'd And by whose power I well might lodge a fear To be again displac'd which to avoid, I cut them off, and had a purpose now To lead out many to the Holy Land, Lest rest and lying still might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry, Be it thy course to busy giddy minds With foreign quarrels, that action, hence borne out, May waste the memory of the former days More would I, but my lungs are wasted so That strength of speech is utterly denied me — How I came by the crown, O God forgive, And grant it may with thee in true peace live!

Prince My gracious liege,

You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me. Then plain and right must my possession be; Which I with more than with a common pain 'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain

Enter Prince John of Lancaster

King Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster Lancaster Health, peace, and happiness to my 10yal father !

King Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John, But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown From this bare wither'd trunk upon thy sight 230 My worldly business makes a period. Where is my Lord of Warwick?

Prince

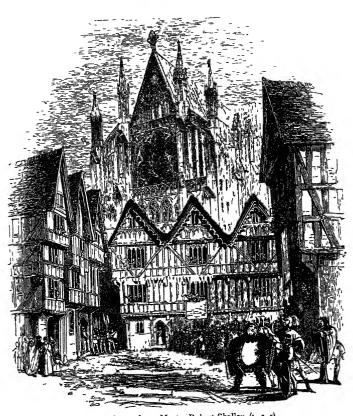

My Lord of Warwick!

Enter WARWICK, and others

King. Doth any name particular belong Unto the lodging where I first did swoon? Warwick. 'T is call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord. King Laud be to God! even there my life must end. It hath been prophesied to me many years, I should not die but in Terusalem, Which vainly I suppos'd the Holy Land -But bear me to that chamber there I'll lie; In that Jerusalem shall Harry die.

Stand by me here, Master Robert Shallow (v 5 5)

ACT V

Scene I. Gloucestershire Shallow's House.

Enter Shallow, Falstaff, Bardolph, and Page.

Shallow. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night.

What, Davy, I say!

Falstaff. You must excuse me, Master Robert Shallow Shallow. I will not excuse you, you shall not be excused, excuses shall not be admitted, there is no excuse shall serve, you shall not be excused —Why, Davy!

Enter DAVY.

Davy. Here, sir.

Shallow Davy, Davy, Davy, let me see, Davy; let me see, Davy, let me see yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither—Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Marry, sir, thus, those precepts cannot be served and, again, sir, shall we sow the headland with wheat?

Shallow. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook; —are there no young pigeons?

Davy. Yes, sir.—Here is now the smith's note for shoeing and plough-irons.

Shallow. Let it be cast and paid.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had,—and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?

Shallow. A' shall answer it.—Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir?

Shallow. Yea, Davy. I will use him well, a friend i' court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy; for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.

Davy. No worse than they are backbitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.

Shallow Well conceited, Davy. About thy business, Davy. Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Woncot against Clement Perkes of the hill.

Shallow There is many complaints, Davy, against that Visor; that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.

Davy I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir, but yet, God foibid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years, and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir, therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced

Shallow. Go to, I say he shall have no wrong Look about, Davy — [Exit Davy] Where are you, Sir John? Come, come, come, off with your boots — Give me your hand, Master Bardolph

Bardolph. I am glad to see your worship

Shallow. I thank thee with all my heart, kind Master Bardolph,—and welcome, my tall fellow [to the Page]—Come, Sir John.

Falstaff. I'll follow you, good Master Robert Shallow.— [Exit Shallow] Bardolph, look to our horses - [Exeunt Bardolph and Page I If I were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermits' staves as Master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his: they, by observing of him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-Their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese If I had a suit to Master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master; if to his men, I would curry with Master Shallow that no man could better command his servants. certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another, therefore let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow to keep Prince Hairy in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions, which is four terms, or two actions, and a' shall laugh without intervallums. O, it is much that a lie with a slight oath and a jest with a sad brow will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders! O, you shall see him laugh till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up!

Shallow [Within] Sir John!

Falstaff I come, Master Shallow; I come, Master Shallow.

[Exit

Scene II Westminster The Palace

Enter WARWICK and the LORD CHIEF-JUSTICE, meeting

Warwick How now, my lord chief-justice! whither away? Chief-Justice. How doth the king?

Warwick Exceeding well, his cares are now all ended.

Chref-Justice I hope, not dead

Warwick He's walk'd the way of nature,

And to our purposes he lives no more

Chief-Justice. I would his majesty had call'd me with him,

The service that I truly did his life

Hath left me open to all injuries

Warwick. Indeed I think the young king loves you not.

Chief-Justice. I know he doth not, and do arm myself 10

To welcome the condition of the time,

Which cannot look more hideously upon me

Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter Lancaster, Clarence, Gloucester, Westmoreland, and others.

Warwick Here come the heavy issue of dead Harry. O that the living Harry had the temper Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen! How many nobles then should hold their places, That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort!

Chief-Justice. O God, I fear all will be overtuin'd!

Lancaster Good morrow, cousin Warwick, good morrow.

Character

Gloucester Clarence. Good morrow, cousin.

Lancaster. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

Warwick. We do remember, but our argument Is all too heavy to admit much talk.

Lancaster. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Chief-Justice. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!
Gloucester. O, good my lord, you have lost a friend indeed!
And I dare swear you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow, it is suite your own.

Lancaster Though no man be assur'd what grace to find, You stand in coldest expectation.

I am the sorrier, would't were otherwise.

Clarence. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair; Which swims against your stream of quality.

Chref-Fustice. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour, Led by the impartial conduct of my soul; And never shall you see that I will beg A ragged and forestall'd remission If truth and upright innocency fail me, I'll to the king my master that is dead, And tell him who hath sent me after him.

Warwick. Here comes the prince.

Enter KING HENRY the Fifth, attended

Chief-Justice Good morrow, and God save your majesty!

King. This new and goigeous garment, majesty,

Sits not so easy on me as you think.—

Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear.

This is the English, not the Turkish court;

Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,

But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers,

60

80

For, by my faith, it very well becomes you. Sorrow so royally in you appears
That I will deeply put the fashion on
And wear it in my heart. Why then, be sad;
But entertain no more of it, good brothers,
Than a joint builden laid upon us all
For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd,
I'll be your father and your brother too,
Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares.
Yet weep that Harry's dead, and so will I,
But Harry lives, that shall convert those tears
By number into hours of happiness.

Princes. We hope no other from your majesty.

King. You all look strangely on me,—and you most,
You are, I think, assur'd I love you not.

Chief - Justice. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly, Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me King. No?

How might a prince of my great hopes forget
So great indignities you laid upon me?
What ' rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison'
The immediate heir of England! Was this easy?
May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?

Chief-Justice. I then did use the person of your father; The image of his power lay then in me:
And, in the administration of his law,
Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth,
Your highness pleased to forget my place,
The majesty and power of law and justice,
The image of the king whom I presented,
And struck me in my very seat of judgment,
Whereon, as an offender to your father,
I gave bold way to my authority
And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
Be you contented, wearing now the garland,

To have a son set your decrees at nought, To pluck down justice from your awful bench. To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword That guards the peace and safety of your person; Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image And mock your workings in a second body. Question your royal thoughts, make the case yours; Be now the father and propose a son, Hear your own dignity so much profan'd, See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted, Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd; And then imagine me taking your part, And in your power soft silencing your son. After this cold considerance, sentence me; And, as you are a king, speak in your state What I have done that misbecame my place, My person, or my liege's sovereignty.

King You are right, justice, and you weigh this well, Therefore still bear the balance and the sword: And I do wish your honours may increase. Till you do live to see a son of mine Offend you and obey you, as I did So shall I live to speak my father's words 'Happy am I, that have a man so bold, That dares do justice on my proper son; And not less happy, having such a son, That would deliver up his greatness so Into the hands of justice.' You did commit me. For which, I do commit into your hand Th' unstained sword that you have us'd to bear; With this remembrance,—that you use the same With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand. You shall be as a father to my youth; My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear,

And I will stoop and humble my intents 120 To your well-practis'd wise directions — And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you, My father is gone wild into his grave, For in his tomb lie my affections, And with his spirit sadly I survive. To mock the expectation of the world, To frustrate prophecies and to raze out Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down After my seeming. The tide of blood in me Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now, 130 Now doth it turn and ebb back to the sea, Where it shall mingle with the state of floods And flow henceforth in formal majesty. Now call we our high court of parliament, And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel. That the great body of our state may go In equal rank with the best govern'd nation; That war, or peace, or both at once, may be As things acquainted and familiar to us,-In which you, father, shall have foremost hand -Our coronation done, we will accite, As I before remember'd, all our state, And, God consigning to my good intents, No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say. God shorten Harry's happy life one day! Exeunt.

Scene III. Gloucestershire Shallow's Orchard

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Silence, Davy, Bardolph, and the Page. .

Shallow Nay, you shall see my orchard, where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of my own graffing, with a dish of caraways, and so forth,—come, cousin Silence;—and then to bed

Falstaff Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling and a rich.

"Shallow Bairen, bairen, barren; beggars all, beggars all, Sir John." marry, good air.—Spiead, Davy, spiead, Davy, well said, Davy

Falstaff This Davy serves you for good uses; he is your serving-man and your husband.

Shallow. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John—by the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper!—a good varlet—Now sit down, now sit down.—Come, cousin.

Silence. Ah, sirrah! quoth-a, we shall [Sings]

Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer,

And praise God for the merry year,

When flesh is cheap and females dear,

And lusty lads roam here and there

So merrily,

And ever among so merrily.

Falstaff. There's a merry heart!—Good Master Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon.

Shallow. Give Master Bardolph some wine, Davy

Davy. Sweet sir, sit; I'll be with you anon; most sweet sir, sit.—Master page, good master page, sit. Proface! What you want in meat, we'll have in drink. But you must bear, the heart's all.

Shallow. Be merry, Master Bardolph;—and, my little soldier there, be merry.

Silence. [Sings]

Be merry, be merry, my wife has all;
For women are shiews, both short and tall:
'T is merry in hall when beards wag all,
And welcome merry Shrove-tide.
Be merry, be merry.

Falstaff. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Silence Who, I? I have been merry twice and once ere now.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. There's a dish of leather-coats for you.

[To Bardolph.

Shallow. Davy!

Davy. Your worship !—I'll be with you straight [to Bar-dolph].—A cup of wine, sir?

Silence. [Sings]

A cup of wine that's brisk and fine, And drink unto the leman mine, And a merry heart lives long a Falstaff. Well said, Master Silence.

Silence An we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet o' the night.

Falstaff. Health and long life to you, Master Silence.

Silence. [Sings]

Fill the cup, and let it come,

I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.

Shallow Honest Baidolph, welcome, if thou wantest any thing, and will not call, beshrew thy heart.—Welcome, my little tiny thief [to the Page], and welcome indeed too —I'll drink to Master Bardolph, and to all the cavaleros about London

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die.

Bardolph An I might see you there, Davy,— 59

Shallow By the mass, you'll crack a quart together, ha! will you not, Master Bardolph?

Bardolph Yea, sir, in a pottle-pot

Shallow By God's liggens, I thank thee —The knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that. A' will not out, he is true bred Bardolph And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shallow. Why, there spoke a king Lack nothing, be merry.—[Knocking within.] Look who's at door there—Ho' who knocks?

[Exit Davy.

100

Falstaff. Why, now you have done me right 70 [To Silence, seeing him take off a bumper.

Silence. [Sings] Do me right, And dub me knight, Samingo.

Ts 't not so?

Falstaff 'T is so

Silence. Is 't so? Why then, say an old man can do somewhat

Re-enter DAVY

Davy. An 't please your worship, there 's one Pistol come from the court with news

Falstaff. From the court! let him come in.—

Enter PISTOL

How now, Pistol!

Pistol Sir John, God save you!

Falstaff What wind blew you hither, Pistol?

Pistol Not the ill wind which blows no man to good Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in this realm.

Silence. By 'r lady, I think a' be, but goodman Puff of Barson.

Pistol Puff!

Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base!— Sir John, I am thy Pistol and thy friend, And helter-skelter have I rode to thee, And tidings do I bring, and lucky joys,

And golden times, and happy news of price.

Falstaff I pray thee now, deliver them like a man of this would Pastol A foutra for the world and worldlings base! I speak of Africa and golden joys.

Falstaff. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news? Let King Cophetua know the truth thereof.

Silence. [Sings] And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John Pistol Shall dunghill curs confiont the Helicons?

And shall good news be baffled?

Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap

Silence Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding

Pistol Why then, lament therefore.

Shallow Give me pardon, sir —If, sii, you come with news from the court, I take it there's but two ways,—either to utter them, or to conceal them I am, sir, under the king in some authority.

Pistol Under which king, Bezonian? speak, or die

Shallow Under King Harry.

Harry the Fourth? or Fifth?

Shallow Harry the Fourth

Pistol. A foutra for thine office!—

Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king,

Harry the Fifth's the man I speak the truth,

When Pistol lies, do this, and fig me, like The bragging Spaniard.

Falstaff. What, is the old king dead?

Pistol As nail in door; the things I speak are just. 119 Falstaff. Away, Bardolph! saddle my horse—Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 't is thine.—Pistol, I will double-charge thee with dignities.

Bardolph O joyful day!—I would not take a knighthood for my fortune.

Pistal

Pistol What! I do biing good news?

Falstaff Carry Master Silence to bed — Master Shallow, my Lord Shallow,—be what thou wilt, I am fortune's steward—get on thy boots, we'll ride all night.—O sweet Pistol!—Away, Bardolph!—[Exit Bardolph] Come, Pistol, utter more to me, and withal devise something to do thyself good—Boot, boot, Master Shallow, I know the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses, the laws of England are at my commandment. Blessed are they that have been Pistol Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also! 'Where is the life that late I led?' say they. Why, here it is, welcome these pleasant days!

[Exeunt.

Scene IV London A Street.

Enter Beadles, dragging in Hostess Quickly and Doll TEARSHEET

Hostess No, thou arrant knave, I would to God that I might die, that I might have thee hanged. thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

I Beadle. The constables have delivered her over to me, and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her: there hath been a man or two lately killed about her Doll Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie Come on, thou damned tripe-visaged rascal, thou paper-faced villain.

Hostess. O the Lord, that Sir John were come! he would make this a bloody day to somebody

I Beadle Come, I charge you both go with me, for the man is dead that you and Pistol beat amongst you.

Doll. I'll tell you what, you thin man in a censer, I will have you as soundly swinged for this,-you blue-bottle rogue, you filthy famished correctioner, if you be not swinged, I'll forswear half-kutles.

1 Beadle. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come

Hostess. O God, that right should thus overcome might! Well, of sufferance comes ease

Doll Come, you rogue, come; bring me to a justice.

Hostess. Ay, come, you starved blood-hound

Doll Goodman death, goodman bones!

Hostess. Thou atomy, thou!

Doll Come, you thin thing, come, you rascal.

I Beadle. Very well

Exeunt

Scene V A Public Place near Westminster Abbey. Enter two Glooms, strewing rushes.

- I Groom. More rushes, more rushes.
- 2 Groom The trumpets have sounded twice.
- I Groom. 'T will be two o'clock ere they come from the cononation. Dispatch, dispatch. [Exeunt

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Pistol, Bardolph, and Page.

Falstaff Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow, I will make the king do you grace I will leer upon him as a' comes by, and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.

Pistol. God bless thy lungs, good knight!

Falstaff Come here, Pistol, stand behind me —O, if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 't is no matter; this poor show doth better. this doth infer the zeal I had to see him.

Shallow. It doth so.

Falstaff. It shows my earnestness of affection,-

Shallow. It doth so.

Falstaff. My devotion,-

Shallow. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Falstaff. As it were, to ride day and night, and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me,—

Shallow. It is best, certain.

Falstaff. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him, thinking of nothing else, putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pistol. 'T is semper idem, for obsque hoc nihil est 't is all in every part.

Shallow 'T is so, indeed

Pistol My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver,

And make thee rage.

Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts,

Is in base durance and contagious prison,

Hal'd thither

. By most mechanical and dirty hand -

Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell Alecto's snake,

For Doll is in. Pistol speaks nought but truth.

Falstaff. I will deliver her.

50

[Shouts within, and the trumpets sound. Pistol. There roar'd the sea, and trumpet-clangor sounds.

Enter the King and his train, the LORD CHIEF-JUSTICE among them.

Falstaff God save thy grace, King Hal! my royal Hal!

Pistol. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame!

Falstaff. God save thee, my sweet boy!

King. My lord chief-justice, speak to that vain man.

Chief-Fustice. Have you your wits? know you what 't is you speak?

Falstaff. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee, my heart! King. I know thee not, old man: fall to thy prayers;

How ill white hairs become a fool and jester!

I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,

So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane,

But, being awak'd, I do despise my dream.

Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace;

Leave gormandizing; know the grave doth gape

For thee thrice wider than for other men.

Reply not to me with a fool-born jest ·

Presume not that I am the thing I was;

For God doth know, so shall the world perceive,

That I have turn'd away my former self;

So will I those that kept me company 60 When thou dost hear I am as I have been, Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast, The tutor and the feeder of my nots, Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death, As I have done the rest of my misleaders, Not to come near our person by ten mile. EPILOGUE.

Spoken by a Dancer.

First my fear, then my courtesy, last my speech My fear is your displeasure, my courtesy my duty, and my speech to beg your paidons. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me; for what I have to say is of mine own making, and what indeed I should say will, I doubt, prove mine own mairing But to the purpose, and so to the venture Be it known to you, as it is very well, I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it and to promise you a better. I meant indeed to pay you with this; which, if like an ill venture it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here I promised you I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies, bate me some and I will pay you some, and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely.

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet that were but light payment, to dance out of your debt But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so would I All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me, if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly.

One word more, I beseech you If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you meiry with fair Katherine of France where, for any thing I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already a' be killed with your hard opinions; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary, when my legs are too, I will bid you good night and so kneel down before you; but, indeed, to pray for the queen.

The abbreviations of the names of Shakespeare's Plays will be readily understood, as T N for Tuelfik Night, Cor for Coriolanis, s Hen VI for The Third Part of King Henry the Sixth, etc. <math>P P refers to The Passionate Pilgrim, V and A to Venus and A donis, L C to Lover's Complaint, and Sonn to the Sonnets

When the abbreviation of the name of a play is followed by a reference to page, Rolfe's edition of the play is meant

The numbers of the lines (except for 2 Henry IV.) are those of the "Globe" ed or of the "Acme" reprint of that ed.

NOTES.

INTRODUCTION

THE following extracts from Holinshed's History of England (which we give as printed by J. Hunter) comprise all the passages of any importance illustrating the play:

"The king was minded to have gone into Wales against the Welsh rebels, that, under their chieftain Owen Glendower, ceased not to do much mischief still against the English subjects. But at the same time, to his further disquieting, there was a conspiracy put in practice against him at home by the earl of Northumberland, who had conspired with Richard Scroope, archbishop of York, Thomas Mowbray, earl marshall, son to Thomas, duke of Norfolk, who for the quarrel betwith him and King Henry had been banished, the lords Hastings, Fauconbridge, Bardolfe, and diverse others. It was appointed that they should meet altogether with their whole power upon Yorkswold, at a day assigned, and that the earl of Northumberland should be chieftain, promising to bring with him a great number of Scots. The archbishop, accompanied with the earl marshall, devised certain articles of such matters as it was supposed that, not only the commonalty of the realm, but also the nobility, found themselves grieved with which articles they showed flist unto such of their adherents as were near about them, and after sent them abroad to their friends further off, assuring them that, for redress of such oppressions, they would shed the last drop of blood in their bodies, if need were

"The archbishop, not meaning to stay after he saw himself accompanied with a great number of men, that came flocking to York to take his part in this quairel, forthwith discovered his enterprise, causing the articles aforesaid to be set up in the public streets of the city of York, and upon the gates of the monasteries, that each man might understand the cause that moved him to rise in arms against the king, the reforming whereof did not yet appertain unto him Hei eupon knights, esquii es, gentlemen, veomen, and other of the commons, as well of the city, towns, and countries about, being allured either for desire of change, or else for desire to see a reformation in such things as were mentioned in the articles, assembled together in great numbers, and the archbishop coming forth amongst them, clad in armour, encouraged, exhorted, and pricked them forth to take the enterprise in hand, and manfully to continue in their begun purpose, promising forgiveness of sins to all them whose hap it was to die in the quairel; and thus, not only all the citizens of York, but all other in the countries about that were able to bear weapon, came to the archbishop and the earl marshall. Indeed, the respect that men had to the archbishop caused them to like the better of the cause, since the gravity of his age, his integrity of life, and incomparable learning, with the reverend aspect of his amiable personage, moved all men to have him in no small estimation.

"The king, advertised of these matters, meaning to prevent them, left his journey into Wales, and marched with all speed towards the north parts. Also Rafe Nevill, earl of Westmoreland, that was not far off, together with the lord John of Lancaster, the king's son, being informed of this rebellious attempt, assembled together such power as they might make, and together with those which were appointed to attend on the said lord John, to defend the borders against the Scots, as the lord Henry Fitzhugh, the lord Rafe Evers, the lord Robert Umfrevill, and others, made forward against the rebels, and coming into a plain within the forest of Galtree, caused their standards to be pitched down in like sort as the archbishop had pitched his over against them, being far stronger in number of people than the other, for (as some write) there were of the rebels at the least twenty thousand men

"When the earl of Westmoreland perceived the force of the adversaries, and that they lay still and attempted not to come forward upon him, he subtilly devised how to quail their pui pose, and forthwith despatched messengers unto the archbishop, to understand the cause as it were of that gieat assembly, and for what cause (contrary to the king's peace) they came so in armour. The aichbishop answered, that he took nothing in hand against the king's peace, but that whatsoever he did tended rather to advance the peace and quiet of the commonwealth than otherwise; and where he and his company were in arms, it was for fear of the king, to whom he could have no free access, by leason of such a multitude of flatterers as were about him, and therefore he maintained that his purpose to be good and profitable, as well for the king himself as for the realm, if men were willing to understand a truth, and herewith he showed forth a scroll, in which the articles were written whereof before ve have heard.

"The messengers returning to the earl of Westmoreland, showed him what they had heard and brought from the archbishop. When he had read the articles, he showed in word and countenance outwardly that he liked of the archbishop's holy and virtuous intent and purpose, promising that he and his would prosecute the same in assisting the archbishop, who rejoicing hereat gave credit to the earl, and persuaded the earl marshall (against his will as it were) to go with him to a place appointed for them to commune together. Here when they were met with like number on either part, the articles were read over, and without any more authence and of Westmoreland and those that were with him, agreed to do their best to see that a reformation might be had, according to the same.

"The earl of Westmoreland using more policy than the rest. Well (said he) then our travail is come to the wished end and where our people have been long in armour, let them depart home to their wonted trades and occupations. in the meantime let us drink together in sign of agreement, that the people on both sides may see it, and know that it is tiue, that we be light at point. They had no sooner shaken hands together, but that a knight was sent straightways from the archbishop, to bring word to the people that there was peace concluded, commanding each man to lay aside his arms, and to resort home to their houses. The people beholding such tokens of peace, as shaking of hands and drinking together of the lords in loving manner, they being already wearied with the unaccustomed travail of war, brake up their field and returned homewards: but in the meantime, whilst the people of the aichbishop's side withdrew away, the number of the contrary part increased, according to order given by the earl of Westmoreland, and yet the archbishop perceived not that he was deceived, until the earl of Westmoreland arrested both him and the earl marshall with diverse other. Thus saith Walsingham. But others write somewhat otherwise of this matter, affirming that the earl of Westmoreland indeed, and the lord Rafe Evers, procured the archbishop and the earl marshall to come to a communication with them, upon a ground just in the midway betwixt both the armies, where the earl of Westmoreland in talk declared to them how perilous an enterprise they had taken in hand, so as to raise the people, and to move war against the king; advising them therefore to submit themselves without further delay unto the king's mercy, and his son the lord John, who was present there in the field with banners spread, ready to try the matter by dint of sword, if they refused this counsel; and therefore he willed them to remember themselves well. and if they would not yield and crave the king's pardon, he bade them to do their best to defend themselves.

"Hereupon as well the archbishop as the earl marshall submitted themselves unto the king, and to his son the lord John that was there present, and returned not to their army Whereupon their toops scaled and fled their ways; but being pursued, many were taken, many slain, and many 142 NOTES.

spoiled of that that they had about them, and so permitted to go their ways. Howsoevel the matter was handled, true it is that the archbishop and the earl maishall were brought to Pomfiet to the king, who in this meanwhile was advanced thither with his power, and from thence he went to York, whither the pisoners were also brought, and there beheaded the morrow after Whitsunday, in a place without the city. that is to understand, the archbishop himself, the earl maishall, sir John Lampley, and sir Robeit Plumpton. Unto all which persons though indemnity were promised, yet was the same to none of them at any hand performed

"After the king, accordingly as seemed to him good, had ransomed and punished by grievous fines the citizens of York (which had borne armout on their archbishop's side against him), he departed from York, with an army of thirty and seven thousand fighting men, furnished with all provision necessary, marching northwards against the earl of Northumberland. At his coming to Durham, the loid Hastings, the lord Fauconvicted of the conspiracy, were there beheaded. The earl of Northumberland, hearing that his counsel was betrayed and his confederates brought to confusion, through too much haste of the archbishop of York, with three hundred hoise got him to Beiwick. The king coming forward quickly, wan the castle of Warkworth. Whereupon the earl of Northumberland, not thinking himself in surety at Berwick, fied with the lord Bardolfe into Scotland, where they were received of David, lord Fleming.

"The earl of Northumberland and the lord Bardolfe, after they had been in Wales, in France, and Flanders, to purchase and against King Henry, were returned back into Scotland, and had remained there now for the space of a whole year, and, as their evil fortune would, whilst the king held a council of the nobility at London, the said earl of Northumberland and lord Bardolfe in a dismal hour, with a great power of Scots, returned into England, recovering diverse of the earl's castles and signiories, for the people in great numbers resorted unto them. The king, advertised hereof, caused a great army to be assembled, and came forward with the same towards his enemies, but ere the king came to Nottingham, sir Thomas, or (as other copies have) Rafe Rokesby, sheriff of Yorkshire, assembled the forces of the country to resist the earl and his power.

"There was a sore encounter and cruel conflict betwixt the parties, but in the end the victory fell to the sheriff The lord Bardolfe was taken, but sore wounded, so that he shortly after died of his hurts. As for the earl of Northumberland, he was slain outright

"The loid Henry, prince of Wales, eldest son to King Henry, got knowledge that certain of his father's servants were busy to give informations against him, whereby discoid might arise betwixt him and his father, for they put into the king's head, not only what evil rule (according to the course of youth) the prince kept, to the offence of many, but also what great resort of people came to his house, so that the court was nothing furnished with such a train as daily followed the prince These tales brought no small suspicion into the king's head, lest his son would presume to usurp the crown, he being yet alive; through which suspicious jealousy, it was perceived that he favoured not his son as in times past he had done The prince, sore offended with such persons as by slanderous reports sought, not only to spot his good name abroad in the realm, but to sow discord also betwixt him and his father, wrote his letters into every part of the realm, to reprove all such slanderous devices of those that sought his disciedit And to clear himself the better, that the world might understand what wrong he had to be slandered in such wise, about the feast of Peter and Paul, to wit, the nine-and-twentieth day of June, he came to the court, with such a number of noblemen and other his friends that wished him well, as the like train had been seldom seen repairing to the court at any one time in those days. The court was then at Westminster, where he being entered into the hall, not one of his company duist once advance himself further than the fire in the same hall, notwithstanding they were earnestly requested by the loads to come higher; but they, regarding what they had in commandment of the prince, would not presume to do in any thing contrary thereunto He himself, only accompanied with those of the king's house, was straight admitted to the presence of the king his father, who being at that time grievously diseased, yet caused himself in his chair to be borne into his privy chamber, where, in the presence of three or four persons in whom he had most confidence, he commanded the prince to show what he had to say concerning the cause of his coming

"The prince kneeling down before his father, said Most redoubted and sovereign lord and father, I am at this time come to your presence as your liege man, and as your natural son, in all things to be at your commandment. And where I understand you have in suspicion my demeanour against your grace, you know very well, that if I knew any man within this realm of whom you should stand in fear, my duty were to punish Then how that person, thereby to remove that grief from your heart much more ought I to suffer death, to ease your grace of that grief which you have of me, being your natural son and liege man, and to that end I have this day made myself ready by confession and receiving the sacia-And therefore I beseech you, most redoubted lord and dear father, for the honour of God, to ease your heart of all such suspicion as you have of me, and to despatch me here before your knees with this same dagger (and withal he delivered unto the king his dagger in all humble reverence, adding further, that his life was not so dear to him that he wished to live one day with his displeasure), and therefore, in thus ridding me out of life, and yourself from all suspicion, here in presence of these lords, and before God at the day of the general judgment, I faithfully protest clearly to forgive you.

"The king, moved herewith, cast from him the dagger, and, embracing the prince, kissed him, and with shedding tears confessed, that indeed he had him partly in suspicion, though now (as he perceived) not with just cause, and therefore from thenceforth no misreport should cause him to have him in mistust, and this he promised of his honour

"Thus were the father and the son reconciled, betwixt whom the said pickthanks had sown division, insomuch that the son, upon a vehement conceit of unkindness sprung in the father was in the way to be worn out of favour, which was the more likely to come to pass, by their informations that privily charged him with not, and other uncivil demeanour unseemly for a prince Indeed, he was youthfully given, grown to audacity, and had chosen him companions agreeable to his age, with whom he spent the time in such recreations, exercises, and delights as he fancied. But vet it should seem (by the report of some writers) that his behaviour was not offensive, or at least tending to the damage of anybody, sith he had a care to avoid doing of wrong, and to tender his affections within the tract of virtue, whereby he opened unto himself a ready passage of good liking among the prudent sort, and was beloved of such as could discern his disposition, which was in no degree so excessive, as that he deserved in such vehement manner to be suspected

"In this fourteenth and last year of King Henry's reign, a council was holden in the Whitefriais in London, at the which, among other things, order was taken for ships and gallies to be builded and made ready, and all other things necessary to be provided, for a voyage which he meant to make into the holy land, there to recover the city of Jerusalem from the infidels. For it grieved him to consider the great malice of Christian princes that were bent upon a mischievous purpose to destroy one another, to the peril of their own souls, rather than to make war against the enemies of the Christian faith, as in conscience (it seemed to him) they were bound He held his Christmas this year at Eltham, being soile vexed with sickness, so that it was thought sometime that he had been dead; notwithstanding it pleased God that he somewhat recovered his strength again, and so passed that Christmas with as much joy as he

The morrow after Candlemas day began a pailiament which he had called at London, but he departed this life before the same parliament was ended, for now that his provisions were ready, and that he was furnished with sufficient treasure, soldiers, captains, victuals, munitions, tall ships, strong gallies, and all things necessary for such a royal journey as he pretended to take into the holy land, he was eftsoons taken with a sore sickness, which was not a leprosy, stricken by the hand of God (saith Maister Hall), as foolish friars imagined, but a very apoplexy. During this his last sickness he caused his crown (as some write) to be set on a pillow at his bed's head, and suddenly his pangs so sore troubled him, that he lay as though all his vital spirits had been from him departed Such as were about him, thinking verily that he had been departed, covered his face with a linen cloth. The prince his son, being hereof advertised, entered into the chamber, took away the crown, and departed The father, being suddenly revived out of that trance, quickly perceived the lack of his crown, and, having knowledge that the prince his son had taken it away, caused him to come before his presence, requiring of him what he meant so to misuse himself. The prince with a good audacity answered · Sir, to mine and all men's judgments, you seemed dead in this world, wherefore, I, as your next hen apparent, took that as mine own, and not as yours Well, fan son (said the king with a great sigh), what right I had to it, God knoweth Well (said the prince), if you die king, I will have the garland, and trust to keep it with the sword against all mine enemies, as you have done Then, said the king, I commit all to God, and iemember you do well With that he tuined himself in hibed, and shoitly after departed to God, in a chamber of the abbot's of Westminster called Jeiusalem, the twentieth day of Maich, in the year 1413, in the year of his age 46, when he had reigned thirteen years five months and odd days

"We find that he was taken with his last sickness while he was making his prayers at saint Edward's shime, there as it were to take his leave and so to proceed forth on his journey. He was so suddenly and grievously taken, that such as were about him feared lest he would have died presently. Wherefore, to relieve him (if it were possible), they bare him unto a chamber that was next at hand belonging to the abbot of Westminster, where they laid him on a pallet before the fire, and used all remedies to revive him. At length he recovered his speech and understanding, and perceiving himself in a strange place which he knew not, he willed to know if the chamber had any particular name, whereunto answer was made that it was Jerusalem. Then, said the king, laude given to the Father of heaven, for now I know that I shall die here in this chamber, according to the prophecy of me declared, that I should depart this life in Jerusalem

"Henry, prince of Wales, son and hen to King Henry the Fourth, born in Wales, at Monmouth on the river of Wye, after his father was departed took upon him the regiment of this realm of England, the twentieth of March, 1413, the morrow after proclaimed king by the name of Henry the Fifth This king even at first appointing with himself to show that in his person princely honours should change public manners, he determined to put on him the shape of a new man. For whereas aforetime he had made himself a companion unto misruly mates of dissolute order and life, he now banished them all from his presence (but not unrewarded, or else unprefeired), inhibiting them, upon a great pain, not once to approach, lodge, or sojourn within ten miles of his court or presence, and in their places he chose men of gravity, wit, and high policy, by whose wise counsel he might at all times rule to his honour and dignity, calling to mind how once, to high offence of the king his father, he had with his fist stricken the chief justice, for sending one of his minions (upon desert) to prison, when the justice stoutly commanded himself also straight to ward, and he (then prince) obeyed The king after expelled him out of his privy council, banished him the court, and made the duke of Clarence, his younger brother, president of council in his stead."

INDUCTION.

In the folio this is headed "Actus Primus Scana Prima TION." In the quarto there is no division into acts and scenes

I Enter Rumour, painted full of tongues This is according to the quarto, the folio has simply "Enter Rumour"

Warton quotes Holinshed's description of a pageant exhibited in the court of Henry VIII "Then entered a person called Report, apparelled in crimson sattin, full of toongs, or chronicles." Farmer iemarks that Stephen Hawes, in his Pastime of Pleasure, had described Rumour as

> "A goodly lady, envyroned about With tongues of fire," and so had Sir Thomas More, in one of his Pageants:

"Fame I am called, merveyle you nothing Though with touges I am compassed all rounde."

Cf also Chaucer, The House of Fame, 298

"And sothe to tellen also shee Had also fele up stondyng eres And tonges, as on bestes heres"

This description, as the context shows, was suggested by Virgil's in Æn. iv 174 fol, to which the others quoted above were doubtless also indebted *

- 3. Drooping Sinking, declining. Malone quotes Mach. in. 2. 52: "Good things of day begin to droop and drowse," etc.
 - 6. Tongues. The quarto reading, the folio has "tongue." 12. Fearful Full of fear, as in 1 Hen IV. 1v. 1 67, etc.

13 Big Pregnant, as in W. T. 1v. 1 64, Cymb. 1. 1 39, etc

- 15. And no such matter. And it is nothing of the kind Cf. Sonn. 87, "In sleep a king, but waking no such matter;" Much Ado, ii 3 225. "The sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of another's dotage, and no such matter." etc
- 17. Stop. The holes in a pape or flute are called stops. Cf. Ham. in. 2. 76, 376, 381, etc.

18. Blunt. Dull, stupid; as in T G of V. n 6.41.

Judge Holmes, in his Authorship of Shakespeare, among his "parallelisms" between Bacon and Shakespeare, cites this description of Rumour and the following from Bacon's Essay of Fame "The poets make fame a monster. They describe her in part finely and elegantly; and in part gravely and sententiously They say, look how many feathers she hath, so many eyes she hath underneath, so many tongues, so many voices, he pricks up so many ears This is a flourish There follow excellent parables, as that she gathereth strength in going; that she goeth upon the ground, and yet hidely her head in the clouds, that in the daytime she sitted in a watch-tower, and flieth most by night; that she mingleth things done with things not done, and that she is a terror to great riving?" great cities "

It will be seen that this is almost a literal translation of Virgil's description, even the word monster, which the Judge italicizes as parallel to "the blunt monster with uncounted heads," being directly suggested by the "monstrum horizondum" of the Latin And yet it is quoted as one of the "instances of striking resemblances, in particular words and phrases, lying beyond the range of accidental coincidence," etc !

"But, Valentine being gone, I 'll quickly cross
By some sly trick blunt Thurio's dull proceeding"

26 Rebellion. A quadrisyllable, as in 1 1.50 below Gr 479

33. Peasant Here=provincial, or rural The Coll. M5 substitutes "pleasant"

35 Hold The early eds have "hole," corrected by Theo

37 Crafty-sick Craftily sick, or feigning sickness. The hyphen is not in the early eds. In these compound adjectives, the first part is often adverbial. See Gr. 2

ACT I.

Scene I — I The Porter opens the gate Some editors follow the Coll MS in placing the Porter "above the gate." The quarto reads "Enter the Lord Bardolfe at one doore," the tolios: "Enter Lord Bardolfe, and the Porter."

2. What Who, as often in the predicate. Cf 1 2 54 below: "What's he that goes there?"

5 Please it. If it please See M of V p 136, note on Pleaseth me 8 Stratugem "A dieadful deed, any thing amazing and appalling" (Schmidt) Cf M of V v 1 85 "fit for tieasons, stratagems, and spoils," 3 Hen VI ii 5 89 "What stratagems, how tell, how butcherly," etc.

13 God. Changed in the folios to "heaven," as in many other cases

Cf Oth p 11, and 1 Hen IV p 144, note on 'Sblood

19 B: rwn. Mass of flesh, applied contemptuously to Falstaff, as in I Hen IV 11 4 123 "that damned brawn"

20. Day Day of battle, combat, as often Cf 52 and 1 2 139 below 21. Follow'd That is, the advantage gained being followed up Cf 111 1.75 "thus did he follow it" (that is, follow it up) See also T N. V I 373 "How with a sportful malice it was follow'd"

30 Over-rode Outlode, lode past, used by S only here. Cf overrun=outiun, in Hen VIII 1 1 143

- 37. Forspent Exhausted, wo in out Cf 3 Hen VI ii 3 I "Forspent with toil, as lumners with a race" In Hen V ii 4 36, forspent=foregone, past Steevens quotes Sir A Gorges, trans of Lucan "ciabled sires, forspent with age" Fordone is used in the same sense in M N D v. I 38I
- 44. Armed The quarto reading, the folios mispinit "able," which the compositor doubtless caught from the line above. Pope substituted "agile" Vaughan confuses the matter thus "The folios altered able horse [in 43] to armed horse, and Pope amended both by agile horse," and then he proceeds to defend able horse by reference to T of A in I. 10: "Ten able horses."

45 Poor jade 'Used not in contempt but in compassion" (Steevens) Malone cites Ruh II v 5 85 "I hat jade hath eat bread from my loval hand," but there something of reproach may be implied. See Hen V p 170

47 Devour the way Cf Catullus, ad Papyr 7 "viam vorabit" Steevens quotes Job, axxix 24, and B J, Sepanus "they greedily deyour the way '

48 Staying no longer question Cf M of V iv I 346 "I'll stay no longer question" See also M N D ii I. 235

63 Usurpation Metrically five syllables See on ind 26 above A witness'd usurpation="traces that bear witness to its invasion"

69 Apter For the comparative, cf A Y L 111 2 408 "she is apter to do than to confess she does " The superlative occurs in 213 below.

71 Woe-begone This compound, which is familiar enough now, seemto have been less common half a century ago Warb and Steevens think it necessary to define and illustrate it, and Di Bentley proposed "Ucalegon" (cf Viigil, Æn ii 312) as an emendation! S uses the word nowhere else

72 Diew Pijam's cuitain That is, diew it aside See I Hen. IV p.

87. Chanced. The quarto reading, the folios have "chanc'd"

93 Yet, for all this, etc. Johnson would give this line to Bardolph, as inconsistent with what follows. The contradiction cannot, he says, be imputed to the distraction of Northumberland's mind, on account of "the calmness of the reflection contained in the last lines" He also gave lines 100-103 to Morton, as "a proper preparation for the tale that he is unwilling to tell" The old text may well enough stand if we assume a pause after this first line. Northumberland is not willing to accept the intimation expressed in the preceding speech "And yet," he says, "don't tell me that he is dead" But his appealing words and look meet with no encouraging response in Morton's face, and he goes on, "I see a strange confession," etc

95. Fear Something to be afiaid of, a feaiful thing Cf iv 5 196 below.

102 Sullen Cf Sonn 71 2 "the surly sullen bell," R and F IV 5.

88 "Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change," etc. See also Milton, Il Pens. 76. "Swinging slow with sullen roai"

103 Knolling The folio reading, the quartos have "tolling" Cf. A. Y. L 11. 7 114 "where bells have knoll'd to church," and Mach v 8 50 "his knell is knoll'd" Malone took departing to be=departed, but, as Steevens notes, the allusion is to "the passing bell, that is, the bell that solicited prayers for the soul passing into another world"

108 Quittance Requital, return of blows. The word is used as a verb (=requite, retaliate) in I Hen. VI ii I. 14 Out-breath'd=out of breath, exhausted.

112 In few In few words, in short See Ham p 191
114 Bruted. Noised abroad. Cf. Mach. v 7 22, Ham. 1 2. 127, etc
117 Abated. "Reduced to lower temper, or, as the workmen call it, let down" (Johnson) Clarke remarks. "So correctly maintained in techmical appropriateness are many of Shakespeare's figurative allusions that he often uses words with peculiar and unusually inclusive force, which should be examined and known, in order fully to appreciate the whole scope of his passages.

120. Enforcement Application of force. Cf. A. W. v. 3 107: "by

In posson there is physic Vaughan remarks "S seems to have heard the just old maxim of medicine, 'Ubi virus, ibi virtus,' but he has added to it explanations so expressed as to furnish a good motto for the modern principle of homœopathy "

These news The quarto reading, the folios have "this news." S.

uses the forms interchangeably See Much Ado, p 125
138 Having been well, etc For the transposition of the participial clauses, see Gr 425

141 Strengthless. Cf V and A 153: "Two strengthless doves;" R.

- 23 For a barber, etc "The poet seems to mean that a barber can no more earn sixpence by his face-royal than by the face stamped on the coin, the one requiring as little shaving as the other " (Steevens) Mason explains it better "if nothing be taken out of a royal, it will remain a 10yal as it was "

28 Slops Loose breeches See Much Ado, p 143

30 Band. Bond, as in 1 Hen IV in 2 157, etc

33. His tongue be hotter Alluding to the 11ch man in the parable (Luke, xv1. 24)

Achitophel Ahithophel, the counsellor of Absalom, cursed by David (2 Sam xv 31).

A rascally, yea-forsooth knave "The mild quality of citizen oaths is here again alluded to [see I Hen IV. in I 252 fol.], and excites no less disgust in Falstaff than in Hotspui-affording an edifying comment on the strange points that afford self-complacency to those who plume themselves on their anistocratic superiority and patrician super-excellence. Very noteworthy is it that even while exciting our highest admiration at the spirited lines with which he has limited Harry Percy, or at the unction of blended wit and humour with which he makes Sii John fabricate a characteristic epithet out of a petty oath by way of designating a city mercer, he gives us at the very same time a pithy index of the insolent assumptions entertained by the dominant and domineering classes in his time" (Clarke).

To bear a gentleman in hand That is, to keep him in expectation, flatter him with false hopes. See Mach p 208.

35 Smooth-pates "A synonym for the later and more historical name

roundheads" (Vaughan)

37. If a man, etc. "If a man does his utmost in borrowing, or rather if a man condescends to borrow, in an honourable manner" (Schmidt). Pope changed thi ough to "thorough." For take up = obtain on trust, cf. Much Ado, p. 148.

38 Had as lief. Good English then as now See A. Y L p 139. 40. Looked. Expected. Cf Sonn 22.4 "Then look I death my days should explate." See also Rich II 1 3 243, Hen VIII. v. I. 118, etc. 43 Horn. There is an allusion to the horn of the cuckold, and also to the use of horn instead of glass in lanterns, with a play on lightness (=wantonness), for which cf. L L v 2. 19 fol, M of V v. I 130, etc Waib iemarks that the same joke occurs in Plautus, Amph i I ambulas tu, qui Vulcanum in coi nu conclusum geris " and Steevens cites The Two Mards of Moreclacke, 1609

> "your wrongs Shine through the horn, as candles in the eve, To light out others "

Vaughan observes that the old spelling of lanthorn (as in the quarto) favours the joke; it having arisen out of the notion that the article took its name from the horn used for its sides.

48 In Paul's. That is, in Old St Paul's Cathedral, which was a place of daily resort for the idle and unemployed, as well as for the man of business. Reed quotes The Choice of Change, 1598 "a man must not make choyce of three things in three places Of a wife in Westminster, of a servant in Paules; of a horse in Smithfield; lest he chuse a queane, a knave, or a jade" Malone adds from Osborne, Memours of James I "It was the fashion in those times . . . for the principal gentry, lords, courtiers, and men of all professions, not meiely mechanicks, to meet in St. Paul's church by eleven, and walk in the middle aisle till twelve, and after dinner from three to six, during which time some discoursed of business, others of news. Now, in regard of the universal commerce—there happened little that did not first or last arrive here" Before the introduction of newspapers, notices and advertisements were often posted on the pillars in this church. Blakeway quotes the letter of a servant in Harl MS. 2050. "for yf... I sett my bill in Paules, in one or two dayes I cannot want a servisse." Cf. Nash, Pierce Pennilesse "the masterlesse men, that sette up their bills in Paules for services." In Ben Ionson's Every Man out of his Humour, the scene through the chief part of act in is laid in Paul's, and the action is in keeping with these descriptions of the habits of the place. Cf Ruh III. in 6 1

> "This is the indictment of the good lord Hastings, Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd That it may be this day read over in Paul's."

51. The nobleman, etc Sir William Gascoigne, Chief-Justice of the King's Bench See cut on p 53 above, and note on v. 2. 113 below. 67. Begging. The quarto leading, the folios have "beg."

76 I had hed in my throat, "The he in the throat was a he uttered deliberately; the lie in the teeth was one for which some excuse was allowed on the ground of its having proceeded from haste or some palliating cause" (J. H.)

82. Grows to me. Is an essential part of me.

83. Thou wert better. It were better for thee. See 7 C.p 166, note on

You were best, or Gr. 230 and 352 (cf 190)

You hunt counter. You are on the wrong scent, you are at fault. The folio has "Hunt-counter, 'which is followed by some of the modern eds. Johnson defines hunt-counter as "blunderer," and Ritson as "worthless dog." Turbervile, in his Booke of Hunting, says. "When a hound hunteth backwards the same way that the chase is come, then we say he hunteth counter" Cf C of E. iv 2 39 "a hound that runs counter," and

Ham 1v, 5 110: "O, this is counter, you false Danish dogs!"

101 Whoreson "Applied not only to persons, but to any thing, as a term of reproach or ludicrous dislike, and sometimes (as in the language of Doll Tearsheet) used even in a tone of coarse tenderness ' (Schmidt) Cf 11 4 173 and 192 below

113 Very well, etc This speech in the quarto has the piefix "Old."

See p. 10 above

116 To punish you by the heels Schmidt makes this="to set you in the stocks," but Clarke quotes Lord Campbell "To lay by the heels was the technical expression for committing to prison, and I could produce from the Reports various instances of its being so used by distinguished judges from the bench." Ct Hen. VIII. v. 4. 83 The reply of Falstaff seems to show that imprisonment is referred to here

117. If I do become The quarto reading, the folio has "if I be" 127. Advised by my learned counsel. As Clarke remarks, Falstaff had good legal ground for not coming. Being engaged on military service under the king's order, he was not bound to answer the summons of the Chief-Tustice.

136 The fellow with the great belly Probably an allusion to some well-known blind beggai of the time who was led by his dog

141. For your quiet o'er-posting For your getting easily clear of 148. A wassail candle. "A large candle lighted up at a feast. There is a poor quibble upon the word wax, which signifies increase as well as the matter of the honey-comb" (Johnson) Steevens notes that a similar play occurs in L. L. L. v. 2 10 "That was the way to make his godhead wax." For wassail (=diinking-bout, carousal), cf L L V 2. 318: "wakes and wassails;" and Hum 1 4 9 "keeps was ail"

152. Gravy. "Falstaff's reply has an interest beside its waggishness, as showing that gravity was pronounced grave-ity, preserving the sound of its root; else his joke would have been no joke at all "(W)

154 Ill. The folio has "evil" ("euil"), which W. says is "an epithet much better suited to angel than ill;" but compare "ill spirit" in Temp 1. 2. 458 and F C. iv 3. 289
155 Angel. A play upon the name of the coin. See K. John, p 151, or M. of V. p 144

157. I cannot go, I cannot tell. Probably, as Johnson suggests, there is a play on go and tell in the senses of "pass current" and "count as good

158. These costermonger times. "These times when the prevalence of trade has produced that meanness that rates the merit of every thing by money" (Tohnson).

198 Spit white A perplexing expression Clarke says "Reckoned a sign of thirst, which Falstaff, with his relish for wine, desires to feel, as giving anticipatory zest Spungius, in Massinger's Vigin Martyr, says, 'Had I been a pagan still, I should not have spit white for want of drink '" Furnivall quotes Batman uppon Bartholome, ed 1582. "If the spettle be white viscus, the sicknesse commeth of fleame, if black, of melancholy. The whitte spettle not knottie, signifieth health" Perhaps this last sentence is the key to the puzzle

200. Well, I cannot last ever The remainder of the speech is omitted in the folios

285 and W. T. 1 2 317 36-55 Yes, 2n . or else Omitted in the quarto. In the folio, the passage begins thus

158 NOTES.

"Yes, if this present quality of warie, Indeed the instant action a cause on foot, Liues so in hope As in an early Spring," etc.

This is unquestionably corrupt, and it may be that something has been lost from the text. Of the various attempts to mend it, Malone's is perhaps the most satisfactory, as it certainly is the simplest. W, who also adopts it, paraphrases the opening lines as follows "Yes, in this present quality, function, or business of war, it is harmful to lay down likelihoods, etc. Indeed this very action or affair—a cause on foot—is no more hopeful of fruition than the buds of an unseasonably early spring." Pope gave

"Yes, if this present quality of war Impede the instant act, a cause," etc

Johnson proposed

"Yes, in this present quality of war, Indeed of instant action A cause," etc

Mason would read

"Yes, if this prescient quality of war Induc'd the instant action A cause," etc.

K. points the passage thus.

"Yes,—if this present quality of war,— (Indeed the instant action, a cause on foot)
Lives," etc

Coll. follows his MS corrector, and reads.

"Yes, in this present quality of war Indeed, the instant act and cause on foot Lives," etc

D adopts the reading in the text. V prints the text in the following incomprehensible form

"Yes, in this present quality of war,— Indeed the instant action, a cause on foot,— Lives," etc., and adds a note from which we cannot make out whether the text is misprinted or not, or, if it is, what it was meant to be St, the Camb editors, and Clarke retain the folio text, though they believe it to be corrupt. H. follows K, believing that the change of if to in "increases the obscurity, while forsaking authority," but in his school ed. he makes this change, and points the passage as in the text.

39. Which to prove fruit. And that these will become fruit. For the construction, cf A. V. L. v. 4. 171.

54 How able such a work, etc Vaughan remarks "I wo constructions are admissible. First, 'how far such a property is able to bear a work that will counterpoise the work opposed to it, or the opposition to be brought against it' Such frequently refers in S to the party, person, or quality last spoken of. The second construction is, 'how far our estate is able to bear the expense of such a work as will counterpoise that which is opposed to it' The ellipse of as under such circumstances is not late" We prefer, as he does, the latter explanation Cf I Hen IV 11 3 13 "and your whole plot too light for the counterpoise of so great an opposition."

77. Puissance Here a trisyllable. See on 9 above 80 Baying him Chasing him, driving him to bay. Cf M. N. D. iv. 1. 118.

"When in a wood of Crete they bay'd the bear With hounds of Spaita," and 7. C in I 204 "Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart"

81. Like Likely, as often Cf M of V. 11 7 49 "Is't like that lead contains her ?"

85-108 Let us on, etc. This speech is omitted in the quarto of Fond Foolish, the commonest meaning of the word in S M N D. p 163 of M of V p 152. Douce considers many to be=meyny, from the Fr mesme, but it is probably nothing more than the adjective used as a noun and personified 94 Trimm'd in thine own desires A peculiar expression, apparently =trimmed up (the 2d, 3d, and 4th folios read "trimm'd up") in the things thou desiredst Cf Rich. III iv 3 34 "and be inheritor of thy desire, Vaughan would read "cramm'd," as more consistent with the context.

102 Enamour'd on Cf I Hen IV. v 2 70, and see our ed p. 199

103 That threw'st dust, etc Cf Rich II v 2 30. "But dust was thrown upon his sacred head"

109 Diaw Diaw together, assemble. See I Hen IV. p 189, note on Draw his power

Set on. Set out, march See Rich. II p 197.

ACT II

SCLNE I -3 Yeoman Under-bailiff, or sheriff's officer

16. Forn. Thrust; a fencing term Cf M W 11 3 24 "To see thee fight, to see thee forn," Much Ado, v. I 84 "I'll whip you from your forming fence," etc See also n. 4. 193 below.

21. Vice Figuratively=grasp.

23 Infinitive Mrs. Quickly's "delangement of epitaphs" needs no special comment

25 Sanng your manhoods An expression used also by Fluellen (Hen

V. 14 8 36) and = saving your honour, or your reverence
26 Lubber's-head That is, Libbard's-head For libbard (=leopaid), cf L. L L v 2 551 "With libbard's head on knee" Lumbert=Lombard.

28 Exion Elsewhere (as in I above) we find action in the dame's talk, but, as Clarke remarks, this is in accordance with Shakespeare's mode of indicating these peculiarities of diction Cf Hen V p 163, note on Preach

30. A long one "The hostess means to say that a hundred mark is a long mark, that 15, store, reckoning, for her to bear The use of mark in the singular number in familiar language [cf pound in 1 2.209 above] admits very well of this equivoque" (Douce). Theo. changed one to "loan," but the debt was not wholly for money lent W reads "own" (=owin', or owing) One was then pronounced like own

32. Fubbed off Put off with false excuses Fub is the same word as fob=delude, trick See Oth p 202

36 Malmsey-nose. Cf red-nose in I Hen IV iv 2 51, and see our ed. p rgs. Malmsey wine is mentioned in L L. L v 2 233 and Rich III 1 4. 161, 277.

44 Channel. Kennel, gutter

47 Honey-suckle. Homicidal; as honey-seed (and hemp-seed just below) is homicide Man-queller, for man-killer or manslayer, is an archaism rather than a blunder See Macb p 181, note on Quell. Achilles calls

Hector a "boy-queller" in T. and C v 5-45

52. Woo't Wouldst, a provincial contraction Cf Ham v 1. 298. "Woo't weep? woo't fight?" etc For the second woo't thou? the quarto has "wot ta" The folio reads here "Thou wilt not?"

55. Away, etc. This speech is given to "Boy." in the quarto, and to "Page" in the 1st and 2d folios, the later folios assign it to Falstaff, to whom it probably belongs.

Rampallian is found as a term of reproach in B and F, Greene, and other writers of the time. Fustilarian, which Schmidt is inclined to connect with fustian and Steevens with the Latin fustis, a club, is more probably from fusty, as Malone and Nares give it Fustilugs was a contemptuous appellation for a very fat person. Cf. Junus, 1639 "You may daily see such fustilugs walking in the streets, like so many tuns, each moving on two pottlepots."

58 Good my lord, be good to me. The same expression occurs in M.

for M 111. 2 203. Good=favourable, propitious

60. What are, etc Why are, etc See on ind. 20 above.

71 The mare. That is, the nightmare

73 Exclamation. Outcry against you See K. John, p 150.

77. Marry, if thou wert, etc Coleridge, in his Essay on Method, has given this speech as an example of "the absence of method which characterizes the uneducated, occasioned by an habitual submission of the understanding to mere events and images as such, and independent of any power in the mind to classify or appropriate them. The general accompaniments of time and place are the only relations which persons of this class appear to regard in their statements"

78 Parcel-gilt. Part-gilt, or gilt on the embossed portions. Steevens quotes from the books of the Stationers' Company, in the list of their plate, 1560 "Item, nine spoynes of silver, whereof vii gylte and ii parcell-gylte." The same records contain fifty instances to the same purpose; of these spoons the saint or other ornament on the handle was the only part gilt. Cf. B J, Alchemist:

"or changing His parcel-gilt to massy gold "

Holinshed, describing Wolsey's plate, says. "and in the council-chamber was all white and parcel-gilt plate" Langham says of a bride-cup that it was "foormed of a sweet sucket barrel, a faire turned foot set too it, all seemly besylvered and parcel-gilt" Schmidt explains a parcel-gilt goblet (the hyphen is not in the early eds.) as "a goblet which was gilt, as must be specially stated "

79. Dolphin-chamber. On the custom of giving names to particular 100ms in taveins, see I Hen. IV p. 164, note on The Half-moon.

80. Wheeson. Whitsun. The folio has "Whitson," but the corruption is characteristic, like "Peesel" for Pistol in ii 4 126 below.

81. Liking his father The folio has "lik'ning him." For like=liken. cf. 1 Hen, VI. iv. 6 48: "And like me to the peasant boys of France."

84 Keech. The word meant a lump of fat rolled up by the butcher for the chandler. See I Hen IV. p. 166, note on Tullow-catch.

86. Mess. "The common term for a small portion of any thing belonging to the kitchen" (Steevens). Cf. Oth. iv. 1. 211. "I will chop her into messes "

90 So familiarity. The folio has "familiar."

109 Current. Genuine; suggested by the sterling that precedes.

III Sneap Snubbing, reprimand; the only instance of the noun in S. For the verb, see W. T. p. 149.

NOTES. 162

113 Make courtesy In Shakespeare's day the form of obeisance known as courtesy or curtsy was used by men as well as women Cf R of L 1338. "The homely villain count'sies to her low;" and see Much Ado, p 159, note on Courtesses.

115 I do desire deliverance, etc "Falstaff claimed the protection legally called quia profecturus (see Coke upon Littleton, 130 a). This is one of the many examples of Shakespeare's somewhat intimate acquaintance with legal form, and phrases" (K).

118 In the effect of your reputation "In a manner suitable to your character" (Johnson).

131 Glasses, glasses, etc Steevens remarks "Mrs Quickly is here in the same state as the Earl of Shrewsbury, who, not having been paid for the diet, etc., of Mary Queen of Scots while she was in his custody, in 1580, writes as tollows to Thomas Bradewyn 'I wold have you bye me glasses to drink in . Send me word what olde plat yeldes the ounce, for I wyll not leve me a cuppe of sylvare to dink, but I wyll see the next terms my creditors payde'"

132. Drollery. Apparently=a humorous painting (Schmidt). In Temp. ni. 3 21, it may have the same sense, or=a puppet-show, as Nares and

D. explain it.

The Produgal. Cf M W. IV 5 8 "There's his chamber ... 't is painted about with the story of the Prodigal, fresh and new."

133. The German hunting "Hunting subjects were much in favour for the decoration of interiors, and the chase of the wild boar in Germany would naturally form a spirited scene" (Clarke) Cf. Cymb 11. 5. 16: "Like a full-acorn'd boar, a Geiman one." In water-work=in watercolours This style of painting was done upon the walls (see Gentleman's Magazine, 1833, p 393, like the modern fiescos, and must not be confounded with the "painted cloth" hangings (see A. Y. L. p. 176), which were done in oil

134. Bed-hangings Falstaff calls them so in contempt, as fitter to make curtains than to hang walls (Johnson). Waib wished to change bed to

"dead" (=faded).

136. Humours. Caprices; as in ii. 3. 30 below.

Wash thy face The poor dame has been crying. Draw-withdraw; as in 3 Hen. VI. v. 1. 25, etc.

140 Nobles. The noble was a gold com, worth 6s. 8d. See Rich. II. p. 219, note on Thanks, noble peer.

153 Basingstoke The quarto has "Billingsgate."

169. Being you are. It being the case that you are, since you are. Cf. Much Ado, iv. 1. 251. "Being that I flow in grief," etc.

176 Tap for tap. That is, tit for tat; referring to his retaliation of the Justice's mattention to his questions

177 Lighten. Enlighten, as in Hen. VIII ii 3 79:

"a gem To lighten all this isle"

Vaughan thinks there may be a play on lighten, but the Chief-Justice is too much out of temper for a pun here. See on 1. 2 172 above.

Scene II - I Before God. The folio substitutes "Trust me," as it omits Faith in 4 just below

3 Attached. Seized. Cf Temp in. 3. 5 "Who am myself attach'd with weariness."

4. Discolours the complexion, etc That is, makes me blush.

7 Studied "Studious, intent, inclined" (Schmidt)., Cf A and C. 11 6. 48 "well studied for a liberal thanks," etc

9 Belike "As it seems, I suppose" (Schmidt), as in M. N. D i. I.

130, Ham 111 2. 149, 305, etc

19 When thou keepest not racket there. "Showing that racket-players usually played in their shirt-sleeves, so that when Master Poins's stock of linen was worn out, he could not frequent the tennis-court, because he could not take off his coat at the game " (Clarke) On the cost of shirts in the poet's time, see I Hen. IV p. 183, note on Eight shillings an ell.

21 Holland That is, Holland linen, with a play on the word. Cf. I Hen IV. 111 3 82 The remainder of this speech is omitted in the folios

22 Bawl out That is, bawl out from. Cf Cor v 2 41 "when you have pushed out your gates the defender of them" The reference is to Poins's children wrapped up in his old shirts

32 Stand the push Stand the thrust See I Hen IV p. 180.

- 34 Marry The quarto spells it "Mary," which was the origin of the oath, and the folio changes it to "Why."
- 39 The devil's book. Alluding to the old belief that the devil had a register of the persons who were subject to him (Halliwell).

40. Persistency. That is, in evil. S uses the word nowhere else. 43 Ostentation. Outward show. See Much Ado, p. 157.

52 Accites. Perhaps, as Schmidt considers it, a mispiint for "excites," which the 3d folio substitutes. Accite (=cite, summon) occurs in v. 2 141 below; also in T A.1. I 27

53 Lewd. Referring in a general way to his low tastes and associations, not=licentious See I Hen IV p. 178.

54 Engraffed to. Attached to, intimate with. Cf-enrooted in iv I 207 below For graff = graft, see v. 3 2 below, and cf misgraffed in M N D. ı. I. 137

56. By this light. The folio changes this to "Nay," and By the mass.

in 59 below to "Looke, looke."

58 A proper fellow of my hands. "A handsome fellow of my size" (Mason). Cf W. T p 211, note on A tall fellow of thy hands. For proper, see M. of V p 132, note on A proper man's picture. Cf. Heb. x1. 23. It would seem from the context that the term here implied something of contempt. Vaughan remarks "Possibly a proper man of his hands was a phrase often made use of to introduce qualifications discreditable to the object of them, as in Holinshed, for instance 'a good man of his hands (as we call him) but perveise of mind, and very deceitful."

62. Transformed him ape. Elsewhere in S. the verb is followed by to or

65. Most noble Bardolph. A sportive response. Cf. M. of V ii 9 86 and Rich. II. v. 5.67.

69 Red lattue An alehouse window Ct M. W ii 2 28 "youi redlittice phrases;" that is, your alehouse talk. In a note on the latter passage Steevens quotes The Miseries of Inforc'd Marriage, 1607 "'t is treason to the red lattice, enemy to the signpost" Malone cites Braithwaite, Strapado for the Divell, 1615 "Monsieur Bacchus, master-gunner of the pottle-pot ordnance, prime founder of red lattices," and Douce adds, from the Blacke Booke, 1604 "watched sometimes ten houres together in an ale house, ever and anon peeping forth, and sampling thy nose with the red Lattis"

73 Profited Become proficient, that is, under Falstaff's training Cf Temp 1 2 172

"and here Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit Than other princess can '

See also M. W IV I 15, T of S IV 2 6, etc

75 Althaa's dream S. here confounds Althaa's firebrand with Hecuba's (Johnson) The former is correctly referred to in 2 Hen. VI 1 I "As did the fatal brand Althæa burn'd" Clarke believes that the poet intended that the boy should blunder; but it is more likely that he was forgetful himself

81. Canker. Canker-worms, as in M N D ii 2 3 "Some to kill cankers in the musk-rose buds" See our ed p 150.

89 Martlemas. Martinmas, or the feast of St. Martin, the 11th of November. It was considered the close of autumn, and the word may here have the same significance as "All-hallown summer" in I Hen IV 1 2 178 (see our ed p 146) "But," as Clarke remarks, "there are so many allusions to 'Maitlemas beef' in writers of Shakespeare's time-Martinmas being the season for salting, smoking, and hanging beef as winter provis-10n-that it is very likely Prince Hal's name of Martlemas for Sir John may include this meaning also, since he elsewhere calls him 'my sweet beef' (I Hen IV. III 3 199)."

93 This wen. "This swoln excrescence of a man" (Johnson)

100 Bornower's. The early eds have "borrowed" The emendation is due to Warb, who iemarks "a man that goes to boilow money is of all others the most complaisant, his cap is always at hand." Cf T. of A. и г. 18.

"Importune him for my moneys, be not ceas'd With slight denial, nor then silenc'd when-'Commend me to your master'—and the cap Plays in the right hand, thus but tell him My uses cry to me," etc

Halliwell retains "borrowed," and some anonymous critic has suggested that the reference is to "capping verses!" Cf $Hen\ V$ in 7 124,

108. Romans Waib changed this to "Roman," supposing the reference to be to Marcus Brutus; and others have thought that Julius Caesar is meant.

119 Twenty. Warb sagely asks. "Why just twenty, when the letter contained above eight times twenty?" This is as good in its way as Judge Holmes's putting the use of twenty as an "expletive" among his "parallelisms" of expression in Bacon and Shakespeare (see his Authorship of S p 322).

Steevens says "Robert Green, the pamphieteer, indeed, obliged an apparitor to eat his citation, wax and all. In the play of Sir John Oldcastle, the Summer is compelled to do the like, and says on the occasion, 'I'll eat my word' Harpoole replies, 'I meane you shall eate more than your own word, I'll make you eate all the words in the processe'"

128 Frank Sty Nares quotes Lenton, Leas char 15 "feed at ease, like a boare in a frank"

131 Ephesians "Jolly companions" (Schmidt), a cant term of that day, like Corinthian in i Hen IV. 11. 4. 13. Cf M W. 1v. 5. 19 "it is thine host, thine Ephesian, calls."

146. Bestow. Deport, behave. Cf. A Y L IV 3 87, K. John, III I.

225, etc

148 Leathern jerkins. Commonly worn by vintners. See I Hen. IV

p 164.

150. Declension. Decline, degradation Cf Rich III. in 7 189 and Ham 11 4 149. The quarto has "descension," a word not found elsewhere in S

Scene III -1. Prithee. The quarto has "pray thee"

11 Endear'd Bound, as in T. of A. 1 2 233 and 111 2. 36.

12 Heart's dear. The quarto has "hearts deere Harry," the folio "heart-deere-Harry" Some editors print "heart-dear"

14 Long. Theo. substituted "look."

17 For. As for, as regards, especially common at the beginning of a sentence. Cf. Ham. 1 2 112, 1. 5. 139, etc. Gr 149.

The God of heaven. Changed in the folio to "may heavenly glory"

19 Grey Explained by some as = blue. Cf R and J p. 169 (note on Grey-eyed) and p 192, foot-note

21. The glass, etc. Cf Ham ni. 1. 161: "The glass of fashion and the mould of form;" Hen V 11. chor. 6: "the mirror of all Christian kings" (see our ed p. 152), etc.

23-45. He had ... grave Omitted in the quarto 24 Speaking thick. "Speaking fast" (Steevens and Schmidt) Cf. Cymb. iii. 2. 58 "say, and speak thick," and R of L. 1784.

"Weak words, so thick come in his poor heart's aid That no man could distinguish what he said.

Sée I Hen IV p 149.

25 Became the accents of the valuant Came to be the utterance of all brave men. The plural accents is after the manner of S when referring to more than one person. See Mach, p 209 (note on Loves), or Rich. II. p. 206 (note on Sights), and cf. 55 just below See also iv 1. 193 below. Schmidt explains became as = adorned, was an ornament to. Valiant is here a trisyllable See on ind 26 above.

26. Low. Seymour conjectures "slow." Tardily favours the explanation of 24 above.

30. Humours of blood. Caprices of disposition. See on it 1. 136 above, and cf. iv. 4 38 below.

NOTES 166

31. Glass, copy and book. See on 21 above, and cf also R of L 615.

" For princes are the glass, the school, the book, Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do look."

36 Abide. Meet the pends of

Not capable of defence, but fur mishing the means of de-38 Defensible fence (Malone). Cf Gr 3

A mild form of imprecation. See M N D p 152 45 Beshiew

47 Ancient Former, bygone. Cf T. of S and 2 33 "thy ancient thoughts," Cor. iv 1 3 "your ancient courage," etc

51 Till that For that as a "conjunctional affix," see Gr 283.

52. Purssance A dissyllable here See on i 3 9 above.
57 So suffer d. Allowed thus to try his single strength

- 59 Remembrance Clarke (following Warb) believes that the metaphor of a plant was suggested by "rosemary, which, as a symbol of remembrance, was used at marriages and funerals" See Ham p 250, note on Rosemary
 - 61. For recordation to. In memory of. Cf. T and C v 2.116

"To make a recordation to my soul Of every syllable that here was spoke," that is, to recall to mind every syllable, etc.

64 Still-stand. Standstill, the only instance of either word in S

Scene IV.—I The devil Omitted in the folio, like Mass just below. Apple-johns A kind of apple, which kept two years, but became wrinkled and shrivelled See I Hen IV in 3 5. "withered like an old apple-john." The French called it deux-ans Steevens quotes Cogan, Haven of Health, 1595 "The best apples that we have in England are pepins, deusants, costards, darlings, and such other," and Hakluyt, Voyages "the apple John that dureth two yeares"

8. Cover. Lay the table, as m M. of V in 5 57 and A Y. L ii 5 32 9 Noise Band of musicians See Maco p 233

10 Some music The speech ends here in the folio The quarto adds "Dispatch the room where they supped is too hot; they 'll come in straight" Clarke remarks . "This shows that the apple-johns and the prepared table were for what was called an after-supper, a repast of fruit and wine, like the modern dessert, and which was frequently taken in a different room from that in which the more substantial meal was eaten " Rere-supper (or rear-supper) and rere-banquet were also=dessert

15. Old utis Great fun, rare sport For old as an intensive see Mach. p 197, or Much Ado, p 169 Cf the modern slang phrase, "a high old tune." Utus = merriment, from the Fi. huit as applied to the octave of a festival, or the eighth day after it.

22 Canaries. That is, Canary wine; mentioned also in M W. ii 2. 89 and T N 1. 3 85, 88 What Mrs Quickly means by canaries in M W ii 2. 61 is not so cleai Quandary has been suggested, but S. does not use the word.

28 When Arthur first in court The ballad may be found in Percy's Reliques. The lines there are

"When Arthur first in court began, And was approved king"

31. Calm. Qualm, though, as W. remarks, the two words were pronounced alike in the time of S.

32. Sect. If Mrs Quickly had used the word, we should have no doubt that she meant sex, but in Falstaff's mouth it may be=class. Steevens gives sundry examples of sect = sex; as Maiston, Insatiate Countess. "Deceives our sect of fame and chastity," B and F, Valentinian "The purest temple of her sect," etc. On the other hand, in Mother Bombie, 1594, a courtesan says "I am none of that sect," which is followed by the rejoinder "Thy loving sect is an ancient sect, and an honourable, etc. Douce remarks. "Falstaff means to say that all courtesans, when their trade is at a stand, are apt to be sick."

36. Rascals. The word rascal literally meant a deer in poor condition. See A Y. L. p. 179. "He tells her she calls him wrong, being fat he cannot be a rascal" (Johnson)

Perhaps for "splenetic," as has been suggested. 41. Rheumatu. Rheum and spleen were sometimes confounded, as in B J., Every Man in his Humour, where Cob says, "Nay, I have my rheum, and can be angry as well as another," to which Cash replies, "Thy rheum, Cob! thy humour, thy humour; thou mistak'st." "The mutual asperities of two dry toasts when brought in contact with each other are sufficiently obvious to render Quickly's simile less ridiculous than is her general style of diction" (Clarke)

42. The good-year. Probably a corruption of goujère, or the pox. Cf.

Much Ado, p. 126

48. Ancient. Ensign. See Hen. V p 154. "Falstaff was captain, Peto lieutenant, and Pistol ensign, or ancient" (Johnson)

51. It is. Contemptuous. Cf in 2. 244 below. See also Hen V. iii. 6. 70, R. and J iv 2. 14, etc. For a different use of the phrase, see Macb. p. 168

53 Swaggerers. Bullies; Ritson quotes Cooke, Greene's Tu Quoque "drinke with a diunkard, be ciuill with a citizen, fight a swaggerei," etc. See also A. Y. L. 1v 3. 14 · "play the swaggerer."

62 Tilly-fally. Tilly-vally; a contemptuous exclamation, for which see T. N. p. 137.

74. A tame cheater. A cant phrase=a petty rogue, a low gamester. Steevens cites B and F, Fire Maid of the Inn "By this decoy-duck, this tame cheater." Mis Quickly takes it to mean escheator (vulgarly called cheater) or officer of the exchequer.

76. A Barbary hen. A fowl whose feathers are naturally ruffled. In A. Y. L. iv. 1. 151 we find mention of "a Barbaiy cock-pigeon"

- 94. Compamon. Used contemptuously, as fellow is now. See M. N. D p 125
- 98. Bung A cant name for a sharper, or pickpocket Nares quotes An Age for Apes, 1655

"My bung observing this, takes hold of time, Just as this lord was drawing for a prime, And smoothly nims his purse that lay beside him." 168 NOTES

The word was also applied, in the thieves' dialect, to a pocket or puise. To nup a bung was to cut a puise

100 Cuttle A slang term for the knife used by cut-purses

101 Since when, etc A scoffing inquity. Cf 1 Hen. IV p 157, note on Ay when? canst tell?

102 Two points "As a mark of his commission" (Johnson). See on 1 1 53 above The tolio, as usual, omits the oath in this and the next speech

106 No more, etc. This speech is found only in the quarto

114 Mouldy stewed prunes, etc "Stewed prunes, when mouldy, were perhaps to merly sold at a cheap rate, as stale pies and cakes are at present" (Steevens)

115 Will make the word captain odious. The folio reading, the quarto has "will make the word as odious as the word occupy, which was an excellent good word before it was ill soited, therefore captains had need look to it" Occupy had come to have an indecent sense in the time of S. B. J. in his Discoveries says. "Many out of their own obscene apprehensions refuse proper and fit words, as occupy, nature, and the like."

125. Fastors. The quarto has "faters," the folio "Fates." Factors, according to Minsheu's Dut, is a corruption of the Fr. farseurs=factores, dieers, and it is used in a statute of the time of Richard II for evil-deers (Tollet). Spenser uses it in the sense of traitor, villain, as in F. O 1 4 47:

"By this false faytor, who unworthie ware His worthie shield," and Id. 1v. 1 44 "False faitour, Scudamour," etc

Have we not Hiren here? A lost play by George Peele was entitled The Turkish Mahomet and Hyren the Fair Greek, from which this is probably a quotation. Steevens quotes the old comedy of Law Tricks, 1608:

"What ommous news can Polymetes daunt?

Massinger's Old Law

"Clown No dancing for me, we have Siren here Cook. Siren! 't was Hiren, the fair Greek, man," and Dekker, Satiromastix "whilst we have Hiren here, speak, my little dish-washers" Hiren is a corruption of Irene. Pistol applies it to his sword, but Mrs. Quickly supposes him to be inquiring for some woman.

127 Beseek. Intended as a blunder for beseech, though it is really an old form and pronunciation of that word. See Wb. under beseech and beseek. Cf Chaucer, C T. 918. "But we biseken mercy."

129. And hollow, etc. Pistol's misquotation of Marlowe's Tamburlaine, 2d Part, iv. 4:

"Holla, ye pamper'd jades of Asia! What! can ye draw but twenty nules a day?"

131. Cannibals For Hannibals.

133. Let the welkin roar. Steevens finds the expression in two ballads of the time

134. Toys. Trifles. See M N. D p 179, or Ham. p 247.

143 Then feed, etc. A burlesque of The Battle of Alcazar, 1594, in which Muley Mahomet enters to his wife with lion's flesh on his swoid, and says "Feed then, and faint not, my faire Calypolis," and again, "Hold thee, Calipolis; feed, and faint no more," and again "Feed and be fat, that we may meet the foe," etc (Steevens).

145 Si fortune, etc. As printed in both quarto and folio, except that the latter has "contente" Johnson says. "Sir Thomas Hanner reads Si fortuna me toimenta, il sperare me contenta—which is undoubtedly the true reading, but perhaps it was intended that Pistol should corrupt it" Some editors read "sperato" Faimer remarks. "Pistol is only a copy of Hannibal Gonsaga, who vaunted on yielding himself a prisoner, as you may read in an old collection of tales, called Wits, Fits, and Fan-

'Sı fortuna me tormenta, Il speranza me contenta',

Consect Italian would read "Se" for "S1" and "La" for "Il" (speranza being feminine). The meaning of the couplet is, "If fortune torments me, hope contents me," Douce gives an illustration of a sword with a French version of the motto, "S1 fortune me tourmente, l'espérance me contente"

148 Come we to full points, etc "That is, shall we stop here, shall we have no further entertainment" (Johnson). There is a play on points, as Schmidt and Clarke note

150 Neif. Fist, also spelt neaf Cf M N D iv. 1. 20 (Bottom's speech) "Give me thy neif," and see our ed. p. 172

151. The seven stars. The Pleiades. See I Hen IV p. 142
153. Fustian. Nonsensical, used again as an adjective in T. N ii 5.
119: "A fustian riddle!"

154. Galloway nags. "That is, common hackneys" (Johnson). The

Galloway horses were a small and inferior breed

156 Quoit him. Pitch him, the only instance of the verb in S., as 206 below is the only one of the noun Shove-groat was a game similar to shovel-boar d, but on a smaller scale. It was played on a board or table, three or four feet long and about a foot wide, with a diagram on one end divided into nine partitions marked with the nine digits. The coin (at first the silver groat, afterwards the shilling) was shoved or slid from the other end of the board, the aim being to land it in one of the numbered spaces. Cf B. J. Every Man in his Humon, in 5: "run as smooth off the tongue as a shove-groat shilling;" and The Roaring Girl "and away slid my man, like a shovel-board shilling." See also M. W. i 1 159: "and two Edward shovel-boards, that cost me two shillings and twopence apiece." Taylor the Water Poet calls the game shove-board, and in a note he says that Edward VI shillings were then generally used in playing it. He makes one of these coins say.

"You see my face is beaidlesse, smooth, and plaine, Because my soveraigne was a child 't is knowne, When as he did put on the English crowne, But had my stamp beene bearded, as with haire, Long before this it had beene worne out bare, For why, with nic the unthinfts every day, With my face downward, do at shove-board play "

160. Imbine Thisbe also uses the word in M N D. v. 1.351 "Come, blade, my breast imbrue."

161 Then death, etc. Steevens says that this is a fragment of a song supposed to have been written by Anne Boleyn.

"O death rock me on slepe. Bring me on quiet rest," etc

Reed adds, from Arnold Cosbie's Ultimum Vale to the Vaine World, an elegie written by himselfe in the Marshalsea, after his condemnation, for mus thering Lord Brooke, 1591 .

> "O death, rock me asleepe! Father of heaven, That hast sole power to pardon sinnes of men, Forgive the faults and follies of my youth"

163 Atropos The Sisters Three are apostrophized by Thisbe in M N. D. v. 1. 343, and in the same speech she alludes to the "shears" of Atropos, but the name of the goddess occurs in S only in the present passage.

164. Toward At hand, in preparation. Cf. M. N. D iii I 81. "What!

a play toward " and see our ed p. 156

169 Tirrits. Mrs. Quickly's own word, and "probably = terrors"

(Schmidt).

175 Shrewd. Evil, mischievous. See Hen. VIII. p 202, or F. C. p 145.

182. Chops Poins applies the same epithet to Falstaff in I Hen. IV.

i. 2 151 · "You will, chops?"

184 The Nine Worthus These were commonly said to be three Gentiles Hector, Alexander, Julius Cæsar, three Jews Joshua, David, Judas Maccabæus; and three Christians Arthui, Chailemagne, Godfiey of Bourlion In L. L. V 1 125 fol and v. 2. 486 fol Pompey and Heicules are reckoned among the nine.

190. Quicksilver Used as a simile for swiftness in the only other instance of the word in S., Ham 1. 5 66: "swift as quicksilver"

192. Tidy. The word occurs nowhere else in S, and its meaning here is disputed. It means fat in a passage from an old translation of Galateo on Manners and Behaviour, 1578, cited by Reed; and Gawin Douglas uses it in the same sense in his Virgil. It was sometimes=nimble, agile, and Malone believes that to be the meaning here.

Roast pig was one of the attractions of Bartholomew Fair. "A more appropriate image for representing the appearance of the rotund Falstaff, hot, glistening, reeking, from his encounter with the pestiferous Pistol, could hardly be devised " (Clarke)

193. Foining Thrusting. See on 11 16 above.
199. Pantler The servant who had charge of the pantry Cf W. T.

iv. 4 56. "This day she was both pantler, butler, cook," etc

202. Tewksbury mustard. "Tewksbury is a market-town in the county of Gloucester, formerly noted for mustard-balls made there and sent into other parts" (Grey).

206. Conger. A kind of eel. For fennel, see Hum p 251 "The fennel was perhaps used as a dressing for the conger, as parsley is now for other fish" (W.) Beisly says it was used "with fish hard of digestion" Why the dish is mentioned has not been satisfactorily explained. 207. Flap-di agons. "A flap-dragon is some small combustible body, fired at one end, and put affoat in a glass of liquoi. It is an act of a toper's dexterity to toss off the glass in such a mainer as to prevent the flap-dragon from doing mischef" (Johnson). See also II. T. p. 180.

Rides the wild mare Plays at see-saw (Schniidt). Janea-stools, or joint-stools, were a kind of folding-chair. Cf 1 Hen. IV. 11. 4. 418 and R.

209 Sign. That is, a sign over the shop-door of a boot-maker (J. II.). Breeds no bate, etc. "Creates no disturbance by telling decent stories; the inference being that, in the company frequented by the Prince and Poins, indecent stories would be preferred, and decent ones resented as inappropriate" (Clarke). Warb wanted to change discreet to "indiscreet." For bate (=contention), of the Countess of Pembroke's Antonius.

"Shall ever civil bate Gnaw and devous our taste?"

and Mirror for Magistrates "She set my brother first with me at bate." The word occurs elsewhere in S only in the compounds bate-breeding (in V and A. 655 "this bate-breeding spy") and breed-bate (in M. W. 1. 4. 12 "no tell-tale nor breed-bate") Cf make-bate in The Countess of Pembroke's Arcadia "So that love in her passions, like a right make-bate, whispered to both sides arguments of quarrel." Stanyhurst, in his translation of Virgil, calls Erinnys a make-bate.

215 Nave of a wheel. Alluding to "Sir John's combined knavery and rotundity" (Clarke).

220. Saturn and Venus, etc "This was, indeed, a prodigy. The astrologers, says Ficinus, remark that Saturn and Venus are never conjoined" (Tohnson)

222. Fiery Trigon A trigon is a triangle. The astrologeis divided the zodiacal signs into four trigons or triplicities. one consisting of the three fiery signs (Aries, Leo, and Sagittarius), the others, respectively, of three airy, three watery, and three earthy signs. When the three superior planets were in the three fiery signs they formed a fiery trigon; when in Cancer, Scorpio, and Pisces, a watery one, etc.

223. Lisping to his master's old tables This is apparently=making love to his master's old mistiess. Steevens says: "Bardolph was very probably drunk, and might his a little in his courtship, or he might assume an affected softness of speech, like Chaucer's Frere:

'Somewhat he hisped for his wantonnesse, To make his English swete upon his tonge.'"

Malone remarks that lisping is "saying soft things," and compares M.W. iii 3.77. "Come, I cannot cog and say thou art this and that, like a many of these lisping hawthorn-buds, that come like women in men's apparel, and smell like Bucklersbury in simple time; I cannot: but I love thee," etc. For lisping to Hanmer gave "clasping too," and Farmer conjectured "licking too." Coll. suggests "clipping to," and Vaughan "lipping too."

For tubles = table-book, or memorandum-book, see Ham. p 197

K John, p 160.

230 Kirtle A garment conceining which the commentators have much disputed. See nearly two pages on the subject in the Var of 1821. It seems to have been made sometimes like a petticoat, sometimes like an apron, sometimes like a tunic, sometimes like a cloak Schmidt defines it as "a jacket, with a petticoat attached to it," and the half-kirtle (see v 4 16 below) as either the jacket or the petricoat attached. The words occur nowhere else in S We find kir the in P. P 363, but the song is Marlowe's, not Shakespeare's.

236 Hearken the end. The quarto has "a' the end," and some modern eds read "at the end" The meaning seems to be "wait, and judge when all is done" Schmidt is doubtful whether it means this or "listen to the end of the piece of music" For another peculiar use of hearken, see I Hen IV p 201

р 164.

240. Poins his brother. Ritson explains this as=Poins's brother (see Gr. 217), and the editors generally adopt the interpretation. It may be the right one, but it seems to us that there is quite as humorous a sarcasm in calling Poins the Prince's brother.

241 Continents Probably used as carrying out the metaphor in globe.

Clarke explains it as = contents, with a play on continence

250. By this light flesh, etc. Rowe added here the stage direction, "Leaning his hand upon Doll"
254. Take not the heat. That is, strike while the iron is hot (Steevens and Schmidt). Cf. Lear, 1. 1. 312. "We must do something, and 1 the heat" Clarke makes the expression="get the start of him, get ahead of him" Cf W T. p 120, note on Heat

340 [She comes blubbered] The quarto reads "come, shee comes blubberd, yea? wil you come Doll?" The speech in the folio is simply, "Host Oh sunne Dol, runne sunne, good Dol" D was the first to see here that a stage-direction (as not unfrequently happened) had got into the text Coll retains the words in the text, supposing them to be addressed to Baidolph in explanation of Doll's delay in coming For

14 Sound The folios have "sounds"

17 A watch-case A sentry-box Hanner says "This alludes to the watchman set in garrison-towns on some eminence, attending upon an alaium-bell, which was to ring out in case of fire or any approaching danger" Clarke adopts Holt White's explanation, which makes it refer to an alaim-watch or clock

30 Then, happy low, he down! The quarto reads "then (happy) low lie downe;" the folio "Then happy Lowe, lye downe" Johnson adopted Warburton's conjecture of "happy lowly clown," and K follows Coleridge's "Then, happy low-lie-down " As Steevens remarks, the sense seems to be. "You who are happy in your humble situations, lay down your heads to test! the head that weats a crown lies too uneasy to expect such a blessing"

On the passage, cf. Sonn. 64. 5 "When I have seen the hungry ocean gain," etc.

53-56. O, if this . . . and die. Omitted in the folios, where the imperfect line 'T'is not ten years gone fills out 53 W. remarks of the lines. "If S. ever wrote them, I believe that he omitted them because of their weakness: but I more than doubt that he did write this feeble whine. which seems all the feebler because it is made the needless sequent of the manly and majestic aspiration that precedes it ... It is a square block of puling commonplace let into a grand and vigorous passage"

64. To the eyes. To the face; as in M. for M. v. i. 161. "Her shall you hear disproved to her eyes." Cf. Id. 1 1.69.

65. But which of you, etc. "He refers to Rich. II iv. 2; but whether the king's or the author's memory fails him, so it was, that Warwick was not present at that conversation" (Johnson).

66 Nevel. As Steevens notes, the earldom of Warwick was then in the family of Beauchamp, and did not come into that of the Nevils till many years after, in the latter part of the reign of Henry VI., when it descended to Anne Beauchamp (the daughter of the earl here introduced), who was marned to Richard Nevil, Earl of Salisbury.

67. Eye brimful. The quarto prints "eye-brimme full," and the folio "eye-brim-full.

68 Check'd. Reproved. See on i. 2 183 above

72. Had no such intent, etc. "He means I should have had no such intent, but that necessity,' etc., or S has here forgotten his former play, or has chosen to make Henry forget his situation at the time mentioned. He had then actually accepted the crown" (Malone). Cf. Ruh. II IV. I. 113 "In God's name, I'll ascend the regal throne

74 To kass. Cf. A W 1. 1 238 "To join like likes, and kiss like native

75. Shall come. Changed by Johnson to "will come," to correspond with the next line. Clarke remarks "The present forms a notable instance of that purposed variation in repeated phrases that S. occasionally gives with so much naturalness of effect. Here the variation occurs in a repeated sentence uttered by the self-same speaker, and one following immediately upon the other, but in repeating it he varies one word of it, just as persons do in actual life, and just as Shakespeare's people do."

85. Intreasured. Laid up. Cf entreasured in Per iii 2 65
86. Hatch. Cf. Ham iii 1.174 "the hatch and the disclose," etc.

13. Mad Madcap, merry; as in 28 below Cf I Hen IV. p. 191 18. Cotswold man. The quarto has "Cotsole man," and the 1st folio

"Cot-sal-man," both which indicate the common pronunciation of the word. Cotswold was celebrated in the poet's time for athletic sports and the skill of the natives therein. Cf Ruh, II. p. 184.

19 Swinge-bucklers Roisterers. See I Hen. IV. p 154, note on Sword-and-buckler. Swash-bucklers was used in the same sense. Steevens quotes Nash, addiessing Gabriel Harvey, 1598 · ". Turpe senex miles, 't is time for such an olde foole to leave playing the swash-buckler." Cf. swashers in Hen. V iii 2 30.

41. A forehand shaft A kind of shaft referred to-not very clearlyby Ascham, in his Toxophilus, as follows: "Agayne the bygg-brested shafte is fytte for hym which shoteth light afore him, or els the brest, being weke, should never wythstande that strong piththy kinde of shootynge, thus the underhande must have a small breste, to go cleane awaye out of the bowe, the forehande must have a bigge bieste, to bere the great myghte of the bowe"

42. Fourteen and a half. That is, two hundred and ninety vards. Malone remarks. "The utmost distance that the archers of ancient times reached is supposed to have been about three hundred yards. Old Double therefore certainly drew a good bow" To hit a mark at twelve score was, however, a more extraordinary feat than merely sending a shaft fourteen and a half Instances are recorded of shots at eighteen score.

44. Thereafter as they be. According as they turn out. The good which follows is emphatic. The price mentioned is that of the poet's tripe.

55 Tall Stout, stundy. See T N p 123
58. Backsword man. "Fence at single-sticks" (Schmidt).

60. Accommodated. "This was one of the words that were fashionably affected and brought in upon every occasion by gallants in Shakespeare's time, and which affectation he has satisfized. Its favour among would-be martial men is indicated by Bardolph's affirming it to be a soldier-like word; while the absurd way in which it was hacked and introduced upon all occasions, pertinent or not pertinent, and without the slightest idea as to what was its real meaning, is slily shown by Bardolph's floundering in his attempted definition of the word" (Clarke). Cf. B J, Discoveries. "You are not to cast or wring for the perfumed terms of the time, as accommodation, complement, spirit, &c, but use them properly in their places as others" He ridicules it also in Every Man in his Humour (auoted by Steevens)

221. Serve's. The folios have "serve his." Cf. W. T 11 3, 100 "The trick of 's frown," etc. See also W. T. p. 149, note on Between 's (a similar contraction).

222. Ourt. Exempt, as in Hen. V. iv. I. 122, etc.

227. Three pound. Johnson says "Here seems to be a wrong computation. He had forty shillings for each. Perhaps he meant to conceal part of the profit." Of course he did. The amount paid was above the average for that day. See I Hen. IV. p. 190, note on Three hundred and odd pounds.

241. Thews. Muscle See Ham. p. 187.

242. Assemblance. That is, tout ensemble S. uses the word only here. Schmidt thinks it may be = "semblance," which Pope substituted. Capell gave "assemblage."

244. Charge you. The you is the "expletive" pronoun, or daturus ethi-ens. Gr. 220. Cf. Put me in 251 below 245 Swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket. Referring to the quick motion with which brewers' men sling the beer-bucket on each end of the gibbet (or yoke across the shoulders) in carrying beer from the vat to the barrel.

246. Half-faced. "With so thin and sharp a figure that he looks like the profile of a man" (Clarke). See 1 Hen IV p 154.

248. Foeman. Steevens says. "This is an obsolete term for an enemy 2n war." It is in common use in our day, at least in poetry.

251. Calwer. A kind of musket. See I Hen. IV. p 190. Steevens quotes The Masque of Flowers, 1613. "The serjeant of Kawasha carried on his shoulders a great tobacco-pipe as big as a caliver." He adds: "It is singular that S., who has so often derived his sources of merriment from recent customs or fashionable follies, should not once have mentioned tobacco, though at a time when all his contemporaries were active in its praise or its condemnation." See I Hen. IV. p. 149, note on Took it in snuff.

253. Traverse. March. See Oth p. 169.

256 Chopt. The reading of the early eds for which the modern ones generally substitute "chapt" or "chapped," which means the same. See

A Y L p 158.

"Shot is used for shooter, one who is to fight by shooting" (Johnson). We still speak of "a good shot," etc Steevens quotes The Exercise of Armes, 1619 "First of all is in this figure showed to every shot how he shall stand and marche, and carry his caliver." Malone adds, from Stowe's Annales, 1631. "men with almour, ... the greater part whereof were shot, and other were pikes and halberts, in faire coislets"

257. Scab A term of contempt, here used with quibbling reference to Wart's name. Cf the play on the word in Much Ado, in 3 107 and Cor.

1. I. I69

Tester. Sixpence, as in MW 1 3 96 "Tester I'll have in pouch," etc. Cf testril in TN. ii. 3. 34. We find the veib tester n (=give a tester) in T G. of V 1 1 153.

259. Mile-End Green. The place for public sports, and also for military dull According to Stowe, 4000 citizens were trained and exercised there in 1585 In Barnabie Riches Souldiers Wishe (see on 125 above), we find contemptuous mention of "a trayning at Mile-end greene"

Lay Resided See T. N. p. 146 or Oth p. 193 Cf iv. 2 97 below
260. Sir Dagonel The story of Sir Dagonet is to be found in La Morte d'Arthure, where he is the king's squire. Arthur's Show was an exhibition of archery by a society who styled themselves "The Auncient Order, Society, and Unitie laudable of Prince Arthure and his Knightly Armory of the Round Table." The members, fifty-eight in number, took the names of the knights in the old romance, and their usual place of meeting was Mile-End Green.

261 Quiver. Nimble, active; used by S. nowhere else. Henderson quotes Bartholomeus, 1535 "There is a manei fishe that hight mugill, which is full quiver and swifte."

263 Bounce Bang. Cf K. John, ii. 1 462. "He speaks plain cannon fire, and smoke and bounce"

275. At a word In a word (=bijefly, but what I mean). See Much Ado, p. 130. Cf. also M. W 1. 3. 15 "I am at a word, follow" (that is, I am not of many words).

278 Fetch off. "Fleece, make a prey of" (Schmidt). In W. T. 1. 2.

334 it is=make away with See our ed. p 160

283, Turnbull Street A corruption of Turnmill Street, a disreputable quaiter in London. Steevens quotes Ram Alley "You swaggering, cheating, Turnbull-street rogue;" and B. and F. Scornful Lady "Here has been such a hurry, such a din, such dismal drinking, swearing, &c., we have all lived in a perpetual Turnbull-street."

Duer. Changed by Pope to "more duly."

289 Invincible. "Not to be evinced, not to be made out, indeterminable" (Schmidt). Some editors adopt Rowe's "invisible"

291 "Fancies and Good-nights were the common titles of little poems. One of Gascoigne's Good-nights is published among his Flowers" (Steevens).

202 This Vice's dagger. Alluding to the wooden dagger of the Vice in the old moralities See I Hen IV. p 165, note on A dagger of lath.

294 Sworn brother Alluding to the fratres jurate of the times of chivality See Ruh II p 208 or A Y L p 199

295. Burst. Broke. Cf T of S and I 8 "the glasses you have

297 His own name. That is, a gaunt fellow Cf Gaunt's death-bed playing on his own name in Rich II it 74 fol

298 Eel-skin Cf K John, 1 I. 141, and see I Hen IV. p. 167. 300 Beefs "Beeves" (the tolio leading). Cf M of V. 1. 3 168 "mut-

301 A philosopher's two stones. That is, double the value of the philosopher's stone, or "more than the philosopher's stone" (Johnson). "Falstaff thus vaunts his power of transferring men's money from their pocket to his own as surpassing that of the philosopher's stone to transmute base metals into gold, and the result proves his boast to be no empty one, for he afterwards succeeds in obtaining 'a thousand pound' from Master Shallow" (Clarke). See v 5 12 below.

302 If the young dace, etc "That is, if the pike may piey upon the dace, if it be the law of nature that the stronger may seize upon the weaker, Falstaff may, with great propriety, devour Shallow" (Johnson). Vaughan remarks "The piscatorial metaphor of Falstaff seems peculparly natural to one born on the banks of the Avon, where probably the best kind of angling was trolling for pike with dace or gudgeon for bait"

304. And there an end And there 's no more to say about it See R. and 7 p. 191.

ACT IV.

Scene I -2 Gaultree. Spelt "Gualtree" in the folios. See extract from Holmshed, p 140 above. The great forest of Galties anciently extended to the north of the city of York, and comprised nearly 100,000 acres of land. It remained a royal forest until 1670, when an act of parhament was obtained for its division and enclosure. It is the "Calaterium Nemus" of Geoffiev of Monmouth, who makes it the scene of his story of Arthegal and Elidure.

II. Hold sortance Be in accordance. Cf. sort with in M. N. D. v. I. 55 and Hen. V. 1V I 63.

13. Ripe Ripen, mature; as in K. John, 11. 1. 472, etc.

15. Overlive. Outlive, survive; used by S. only here 16. Opposite. Opponent, adversary See TN p 145

23 Gave them out. Declared them, said they were. Cf. Mach p 244. 24 Sway. "This verb has excellent effect thus employed, to give the idea of a military movement, a body of forces sweeping heavily, yet impetuously, on in a given direction" (Clarke) Johnson compares the use of the noun in Milton, P L. vi 251 (which he misquotes) "with huge two-handed sway Brandish'd aloft," etc. Warb gave the poor substitute

"Let us way," and the Coll MS leads "Let's away"

34 Bloody "Sanguine, or full of blood and of those passions which blood is supposed to incite or nourish" (Johnson). Malone compares $M\ W\ v\ 5\ 99$ "Lust is but a bloody fire"

Guarded with rags For guarded = trimmed, decked, see M of V p. 140, and ct I Hen. IV p 177, note on Velvet-guards Rags is Walker's conjecture for the "rage" of the early eds It is found also in the Coll. MS and is adopted by Sr, the Camb editors, Clarke, D, W, and others.

42 Civil. Well-ordered, or perhaps, as Steevens makes it, "grave,

45 White investments. Dr Giey says that formerly all bishops woie white (the episcopal rochet) even when they travelled

50 Greaves Steevens's conjecture for the "graves" of the early eds. According to some, the latter is only another way of spelling greaves Hanmer adopted Warburton's conjecture of "glaives" Schmidt beheves that "graves may as well be sepulchies here"

52 Point. "A signal given by the blast of a trumpet" (Schmidt).

Many passages in the old diamatists confirm this explanation

55-79. And . . . wrong Omitted in the quarto.

- 57 Bleed That is, be bled. Cf Rich II. 1 1. 157: "Our doctors say this is no month to bleed "
- 60. I take not on me here as a physician. I do not profess to be a physician. Cf C of E. v. I 242

"this pernicious slave, Forsooth, took on him as a conjurer," etc

69 Griefs. Grievances, as in 77 and 110 below. See I Hen IV p 192. 71. Sphere Warburton's correction of the "there" of the folios, and adopted by D, K., W, and others. St and Clarke retain "there," making most quiet=gleatest quiet (cf. M for M iv. I 44 "my most stay," etc) and "there"=therein, referring to the stream of life. Theo suggested "chair" (also in the Coll MS) for "there," but the archbishop is speaking of his companions as well as himself

mission in 162 below

83. Instance. Proof, illustration. See on m. 1. 103 above. 84. Ill-beseeming. Unbecoming Cf. R and J i. 5 76, m. 3 113, etc.

90 Grate on Vex, worry. Cf M W 11 2 6 "I have grated upon my good friends," etc For the transitive use, see Ham p 216. The metaphor is similar to that in galled

93 Commotion = insurrection, as in 36 and it 4.314 above For edge = sword, cf. I Hen IV 1. I 17 "The edge of war;" Rich III v. 5.35

"the edge of traitors," etc

This line and 95 below are omitted in the folios and in some copies of the quarto. It is the opinion of some of the critics that several lines have been lost here and the remaining ones displaced. Various attempts at 1e-airangement and emendation have been made, but they do not seem to us worth quoting

94 My brother, etc This speech, as it stands, is thus explained by Clarke "The grievances of my brother general, the commonwealth, and the home cruelty to my boin brother, cause me to make this quarrel my own. ' The archbishop's brother had been beheaded by the king's order. Cf I Hen IV 1 3 270.

"who bears hard His brother's death at Bristol, the Lord Scroop "

97 Redress. This, as Clarke notes, favours the supposition that something has been lost above, "since it is said in reply, and as if redress had been one of the words used by the aichbishop"

98 Not For the transposition, cf Temp 11 I 121 "I do not doubt,"

107. Yet for your part, etc. "Whether the faults of government be imputed to the time or the king, it appears not that you have, for your part, been injured either by the king or the time" (Johnson)

116. Force perforce A more emphatic form of perforce, and like that sometimes=by force, sometimes=of necessity (see on 1 3 72 above) Cf 1v. 4. 46 below, where it has the latter sense See also K. John, p. 154 W. follows the folio in reading "forc'd, perforce"

117 Then that Changed by Rowe (ed 1) to "when, that," and by

Pope to "then, when."

For the events referred to, see Rich II 1 3

120 In charge. "In rest" for the charge or encounter. For beaver (=the movable front of the helmet), see Ham p 186.

and our ed p 159

139. Indeed The folios have "and did." The correction was proposed by Thirlby, and first adopted by Theo Delius conjectures "and bid," and the Camb editors "and eved "

145. Every thing set off. The phrase is ambiguous, and thus serves the speaker's purpose Set off may be=cast out, ignored, or=rendered account for (Clarke)

"Think arrogantly" (Schmidt). Cf. Rich II p. 154. 149 Overween See also Milton. Sonn. 4. 6:

See also 177 below.

173 By a true substantial form "That is, by a paidon of due form and legal validity" (Johnson)

175. Confin'd. "What they demand is, a speedy execution of their wills, so far as they relate to themselves, and to the grievances which they proposed to redress" (Mason). Some editors adopt Johnson's conjecture of "consign'd." He explained the amended passage thus. "Let the execution of our demands be put into our hands, according to our declared purposes" Malone followed Johnson, but made "consign'd" = "sealed, ratified, confirmed" (cf v ii. 143 below). Waib. changed purposes to "properties," Hanner gave "properties confirm'd;" and Capell "purposes, confirm'd" D and W. have "confirm'd," K. and Clarke "consign'd," Coll. and the Camb editors retain confin'd

176 Our awful banks. "The proper limits of reverence" (Johnson). For awful=filled with awe or reverence, cf. Ruh. II in 3 76. 'To pay their awful duty to our piesence;" and see our ed. p 195. Waib. changed awful to "lawful"

187. Consist. Either=stand, rest (as explained by Malone and Clarke) or ="insist," which Rowe substituted. Cf Per. 1 4. 83. "Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist." The context (cf 165 and 184 above) favours the former interpretation

189 Our valuation. That is, the king's estimate or opinion of us See Gr. 219

191. Nice. Trivial. See R and 7. p. 183

192. Action. A trisyllable. See on 72 above, and cf. partition in 196

193. That. So that. See on 1 1, 197 above, and cf 216 below. Our royal faiths = our faith or fidelity to the king. For the plural, see on 11 3. 25 above. Hanmer changed royal to "loyal."-

194. Winnowed. The reading of the first folio; omitted in the collation of the Camb. ed., which reads "winnow'd."

196. Partition. Cf. Cymb. i. 6. 37:

201. Tables. Tablets, note-book See on 11 4 223 above.
203 History The only instance of the verb in S

206. Misdoubts. Suspicions The noun is found again in 2 Hen. VI

111. I. 332. For occasion, see on 72 above
209. So W conjectures "too," believing that S would have avoided using so four times in six lines He notes also the allusion to the parable of the tares and the wheat

211 Him on. Coll. adopts "her man" from his MS. corrector—an emendation more Hibernian than Shakespearian Clarke iemaiks "It is precisely in Shakespeare's condensedly expressive style to use him in this figurative sentence so as to give the double effect of the husband who is implied in the word wife, and the king who was mentioned at the beginning of the speech "

213. Hangs. That is, suspends it, in a figurative as well as a literal sense. Cf T. and C iv. 5 188.

"When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i' the air, Not letting it decline on the declin'd"

Resolv'd correction = the chastisement he has resolved or determined upon. Cf. K. John, 11 I 585: "a resolv'd and honourable war." The meaning of the whole passage is: and checks or restrains the purposed chastisement in the hand already raised to execute it *

216. That. See on 193 above.

219. Offer. Menace, or assail. See I Hen IV p. 187

221. Atonement Reconciliation, the only sense in S. Cf. M. W 1 1. 33 and Rich. III 1 3 36 See also on the verb, Oth. p. 198. 225. Pleaseth. Cf iv. 2 52 below, and see on 1 1 5 above

Scene II .- I. You are well encounter'd We are glad to meet you. 8. An iron man. Holinshed (see p. 140 above) describes the archbishop as "clad in armoui." 14. Set abroach Cause, but only in a bad sense. Cf. Ruch. III. 1 3. 325 and R and J. i 1.111

19. Imagin'd. The early eds. have "imagine," corrected by Rowe.

20. Intelligencer. Mediator, agent; as in Rich III. IV. 4. 71:

"Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligencer, Only reserv'd their factor, to buy souls And send them thither"

^{*} The passage does not strike us as a difficult one, but H (school ed) obscures it by the following note "The meaning is rather obscure" The antithesis is between correction and execution. Resolv'd has the sense of assured, a frequent use of the word in S. In the case supposed, the arm upreared to strike is sure to be arrested." The antithesis is not between correction and execution, and resolv'd cannot possibly mean "sure to be arrested."

26 Ta'en up. Levied, as in ii i 170 above The folios have "taken up" For other senses of the expression, see on 1 2 37 and 1 3.73 above.

27. Zeal. Some adopt Capell's conjecture of "seal," but zeal of God =devotion to God's cause.

33. Misorder'd Disordered, used by S nowhere else.

36 Grief See on iv I 69 above

- 39 Whose dangerous eyes, etc "Alluding to the diagon chaimed to rest by the spells of Medea" (Steevens)

61. Discharge your powers. Dismiss your forces. It was Westmoreland, according to Holinshed (see p. 141 above), who made this decentful proposal (Steevens) For powers, see on iv. 1 10 above.

79 In very happy season. Cf. 7 C ii 2 60 "in very happy time"

82 Against ill chances men are ever merry "Thus the poet describes Romeo as feeling an unaccustomed degree of cheerfulness just before he hears the news of the death of Juliet" (Steevens) See R. and J. v 1. I fol

85. Passing. Exceedingly; used only before adjectives and adverbs

(Schmidt).

93. Our. Changed by Capell to "your;" but, as Clarke remarks, "it is just one of those fan-sounding proposals that this perfidious son of tricking Bolingbroke makes; he proposes to let the forces on each side march by, that each party may see those that were to have contended with them, well knowing that no such thing will take place, having evidently had an understanding with Westmoreland as to what was to be really done."

94. Peruse. Survey, examine See Ham. p 257
97. Lie. Occupy the same house of lodgings. Vaughan remarks that the same expression occurs rather quaintly in Holmshed, who says of Edward Balliol after his expulsion from Scotland, "After this he went and late a time with the Lady of Gines, that was his kinswoman."

109. Attach. Arrest. See R. and J p. 217
112. Pawn'd. Pledged. Cf K. John, m 1 98. "Have I not pawn'd to you my majesty?"

NOTES. 186

119 Fondly. Foolishly, as in Rich. II. in. 3 185, Rich III in 7. 147, etc. 121 God, and not we, etc "This sickening hypocisty of daring to ascribe to Heaven so glaring an act of treachery and faithlessness is thoioughly in keeping with Prince John's cold-natured and treacherous character—as inherited from his oily, ciafty father" (Clarke)

Johnson remarks "It cannot but raise some indignation, to find this horrid violation of faith passed over thus slightly by the poet, without any note of censure or detestation." Verplanck adds "In this indignation most commentators have joined I do not see why Chief-Justice Marshall is said to have observed to a piolix counsel, who had entered upon a demonstration of some familiar elementary doctrine, that 'he ought to presume that the court knew something' Shakespeare always presumes his readers to have the first principles of morals and human feelings in their hearts, and does not enter into declamatory demonstration to show the baseness or guilt of the deeds he represents in his scenes Here he portrays the political craft of Bolingbioke and his coldblooded son, whom he has thought fit, for his dramatic purpose, with little warrant from history, to place in contrast with his nobler brother. He took it for granted that, when Mowbray asks, 'Is this proceeding just and honourable? his audience would find an unhesitating and unanimous negative and indignant reply in their own hearts, without hearing a sermon upon it from the deceived aichbishop, or a lecture from some bystander"

Scene III.—7 Place Coll. substitutes "dale" from his MS whitt proposed to change place in the next line to "dale ;" but Johnson remarks "The sense of dale is included in deep a dale is a deep place, a dungeon is a deep place, he that is in a dungeon may therefore be said to be in a dale." Vaughan says "In Falstaff's reasoning, the major premiss-that is, 'all places deep enough are dales'-is understood without being expressed; the minor premiss, 'a dungeon is a place deep enough,' is expressed. From the two combined follows logically and strictly the conclusion, 'You, being in a dungeon and of a dungeon, are in a dale and of a dale!" That Falstaff was a logician we might infer from I Hen IV. 11. 4. 544: "I deny your major."

13. Observance. Homage. See A. Y L p. 195.

20. Indifferency. Moderate measure See K. John, p. 151. 21. Womb. Used jocosely by Falstaff, but in Old English equivalent to belly. Wiclif's Bible, in Luke, xv. 16, has, "he coveted to fill his womb of the cods that the hogs did eat."

22. The heat is past. The race is over; referring to the pursuit of "the scattered stray" (iv. 2. 120) Johnson explained heat as "the violence of resentment, the eagerness of revenge." Schmidt makes heat="haste, uı gency."

29. Check. Reproof. See Oth. p. 158, and cf. the verb in i. 2. 183 and in. 1. 68 above.

31. Poor and old motion. "Sir John's wit can make his age as good a plea here as he made his youth answer the purpose on another occasion" (Clarke). Cf. 1. 2. 162 fol. above.

33 Posts. Post-hoises. Clarke remarks. "Falstaff's fine exaggerations have so nich an excess that they proclaim then own immunity from censure as lies." They at once avow innocence of intention to deceive, they are uttered for the pure pleasure of wit-invention. It is not that he for a moment expects Prince John to believe in his having foundered more than a hundred and eighty horses, but he has a relish in defending himself with such exuberance of resource that his hearer shall be compelled to give way. He is not in the right, but it is his will that those who listen to him shall allow him to leave off as if he were in the right, even while he is in the wrong, for the pure sake of his wit. He never proves his case; but he so ably defends his cause that he invariably gains the day. No one can condemn, though no one acquits him, he is left unjudged, and suffered still to go at large, and in triumph—the victor ever."

37 The hook-nosed fellow of Rome. The quarto adds the words "there cosin" before I came, which Johnson took to be a corruption of "there, Cæsar." Capell suggested "your cousin," and Coll "my cousin." The folio reads as in the text.

43. In a particular ballad According to the fashion in Shakespeare's time of making important or interesting events of the day the subjects of ballads. Cf W. T p. 198 (note on Of a fish, etc.) and p. 210 (note on Ballad-makers)

48 The element The sky See J. C. p. 140 or Hen. V. p. 174 Vaughan remarks: "This old signification is still retained by the folk of South Pembrokeshire. A peasant recently said to me 'I thought this morning that we should have rain, for I saw, as I came along, a weather-gall in the element." A 'weather-gall' is a kind of half-rainbow, and is regarded as a sign of wet weather by the country people."

58 Colevile. Here, as in 68 below, the word appears to be a trisyllable, and Steevens thought it might have been intended to be regularly so.

69 Present. Immediate, as often. Cf iv. 1 174 above.

77. Stand my good lord. Be my kind pation, befriend me. Cf. 11 1.59 above.

79 In my condition. "In my official capacity" (Schmidt). J. H. explains it "as regards my disposition" Clarke, who agrees with Schmidt, iemarks: "The frigid Prince John implies that in this capacity it behooves him to tell the strict truth respecting the various officers serving under him, and that therefore saying any thing favourable of Falstaff will be to speak better of him than he deserves"

83. A man cannot make him laugh. "A quality deeply distasteful to Shakespeare, to his finest characters, and to all those who know how essentially a sense of humour is allied to the finest sensibilities of humanity. ... The man who could see and hear Falstaff unmoved was the very man to coolly order 'those traitors to the block of death,' after having cheated them by fair-sounding promises—cold, hard, impervious to feeling throughout" (Clarke).

84 Never none The folio has "never any," but double negatives are common in S See Gr 406.

85. Come to any proof Prove to be worth any thing. Cf. Holinshed,

188 NOTES.

Chron "a vehement flost .. destroyed up all the seed almost that was sowne, by reason whereof small store of winter come came to proof in the summer following " Steevens explains any proof as = "any confirmed state of manhood"

88 Sherris-sack. Sherry wine, called simply sherris just below Sack was "the generic name of Spanish and Canary wines" (Schmidt) lone quotes Minsheu, Span. Dict., 1617 "Xêies, or Xeiès, oppidum Bœticæ, i.e. Andalusiæ, prope Cadiz, unde nomen vini de Xeres A [Anglice] Xeres sacke." Cole, who in 1679 renders sack "vinum Hispanicum," defines Sherry-sack as "vinum Escritanum"

Verplanck thinks that S here "was indebted to the conversation of his friend Ben Jonson, borrowing this from his talk, without meaning that the resemblance went any further." He adds "It seems, from lately discovered manuscripts of old Ben's, that he had precisely this opinion of excellent 'sherris,' in making the brain 'apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes, etc. In an unpublished sort of diary of Ben Jonson's, preserved at Dulwich College, quoted by Hughson (History of London), he says

"'Mem I laid the plot of my Volpone, and wrote most of it, after a present of ten doz of Palm sack, from my very good loid Γ —, that play, I am positive, will last to posterity, when I and Eury are friends with applause'

"Afterwards he speaks of his Catiline in a similar way, but adds that he thinks one of its scenes flat, and thereupon resolves to drink no more water with his wine The Alchemist and Silent Woman he describes as the product of much and good wine, but he adds that his comedy The Devil is an Ass was written when I and my boys drank bad wine ""

90 Crudy. Clude, law, used by S only here Clude does not occur in his works.

91 Forgetive. Inventive, imaginative, from forge The word is found nowhere else

96 The liver white, etc Cf M of V 111 2 86 "How many cowards . have livers white as milk," T and C ii 2 50: "Make livers pale and lustihood deject," etc. Cf also lily-livered (Macb. v 3 15, Lear, ii 2. 18), milk-livered (L L L. IV 2. 50), white-livered (Hen V III 2. 34, Rich. III iv 4. 465), etc

v. 10 38, Ham 11 2 510, and Lear, 111 5 8

106. Kept by a devil Alluding to the old superstition that mines of gold, etc., were guarded by evil spirits Steevens quotes Fenton, Secrete Wonders of Nature, 1569 "There appeare at this day many strange visions and wicked spirites in the metal-mines of the Greate Turke," and 39 Being moody When he is out of humour. Cf Gr 377.

40 Till that. For that used as "a conjunctional affix" (of which we have already had several examples in this play), see Gr. 287

41 Confound Exhaust It often means to wear away (see Hen V p 162) or destroy (see Macb p 189 or R and J p 178).

44. The united vessel of their blood. The vessel of their united blood For the transposition of epithets in S. see Schmidt, p 1423, or Fleav's Introd to Shakes Study, p 51.

45. Mingled with venom of suggestion. Malone makes this="though their blood be inflamed by the temptations to which youth is peculiarly subject." We are inclined to agree with Vaughan, who says "The whole tenor of the king's address to Clarence is that of an exhortation to keep the brotherhood of the princes free from fatal dissensions. Youthful temptations under any point of view are not alluded to " He interprets the passage thus. "even although that blood shall be mingled with the venomous infusion of all such provocatives of discord as the persons and circumstances of the age in which we live are certain to pour into it despite of every precaution, and although, further, that infusion work like aconite or gunpowder"

46. Force perforce See on iv 1. 116 above

48. Aconstum. Acouste. The Latin form is the one regularly used by writers of the time Steevens cites Heywood, Brazen Age, 1613: "With aconitum that in Tartar springs," etc. Rash=quickly ignited; as in Rich. II. 11. 133: "His rash fierce blaze of riot cannot last," and I Hen. IV. 111. 2. 61: "rash bavin wits, Soon kindled and soon buint"

53. And other his. Cf. M. W. 11. 2. 259 "and a thousand other her defences," and Lear, 1. 4. 259. "Of other your new planks"

65. Affections Propensities, inclinations. Cf R. and J. p. 143.

67. You look beyond him. You misjudge or misconstrue him. Schmidt compares Ham. ii 1.115 "To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions." The idea, as Clarke suggests, seems to be that of "overshooting the mark" in our estimate.

74. Perfectness. The word occurs again in L. L. L. v. 2. 173: "Is this your perfectness?"

79 Seldom when. Seldom that. Cf. M for M. IV. 2 89:

"This is a gentle provost seldom when The steeled jailer is the friend of men"

Johnson paraphrases the passage thus: "as the bee, having once placed her comb in a carcase, stays by her honey, so he that has once taken pleasure in bad company will continue to associate with those that have the art of pleasing him"

90. In his particular. In its detail

92. The haunch. The hind part, the close

101. Please et you. May it please you. See on i. 1. 5 and on iii. 1. 98 - above.

105. Stomach Appetite. See Much Ado, p 126.

119. Hath wrought the mure. Hath worn the wall. The past tense of work is regularly wrought in S. The "worked" in T. of A. v. 1. 116 is "an inadmissible substitution of modern editors" (Schmidt). Mure (Lat. murus) is used by S nowhere else Steevens cites, among other examples of the word, Heywood, Golden Age, 1611. "Gut with a triple mure of shining brass." We find the verb (=shut up) in Spenser, F. Q. vi. 12 34:

"he tooke a muzzel strong Of surest yron, made with many a lincke ' Therewith he mured up his mouth along, And therein shut up his blasphemous tong"

The same thought occurs in Daniel's Crvil Wars, book iv., referring, as here, to the sickness of Henry IV:

"As that the walls worn thin permit the mind To look out thorow, and his frailtie find"

The first four books of the Civil Wars were printed in 1595, and S. had probably read them. In the first ed, the lines read

"Wearing the walls so thm, that now the mind Might well look thorough, and his frailty find"

His here = ils, referring to wall, not to mind (Malone).

121. Fear me Make me fear, alarm me See K John, p 147, or M. of V. p. 137. Observe="give heed to reports of" (J 11.).

122 Loathly. Loathsome. Cf Temp. 1v. I 2I: "weeds so loathly" In Oth. 111 4. 62, the 1st quarto has "loathly," the other early eds. "loathed"

Unfather'd heirs=creatures supposed to be born without progenitors, and loathly births of nature=unnatural births, monstiosities. According to St, the unfather'd heirs were certain so-called prophets, who pietended to have been conceived by miracle, like Merlin. Cf Spenser, F. Q. III.

3. 13 .

"And, sooth, men say that he was not the sonne Of mortall Syre or other living wight, But wondrously begotten, and begonne By false illusion of a guilefull Spright On a faire Lady Nonne, that whilome hight Matida, daughter to Pubidus, Who was the lord of Mathraval by right, And coosen unto King Ambrosius, Whence he indued was with skill so merveilous."

See also Montaigne, Essays "In Mahomet's religion, by the easie beleefe of that people, are many Merlins found, That is to say, fatherles children; Spritual children, conceived and borne devinely in the wombs of viigins," etc.

123. The seasons change their manners, etc. Cf. M. N. D. ii. I. 106-114.

As=as if. See Gr. 107.

125. The river, etc. Referring to the tides in the Thames. Cf ii. 3 63 above, and see p. 29. Steevens remarks. "This is historically true; it happened on the 12th of October, 1411."

128 Sick'd. The only instance of the veib in S.

130 Apoplexy. The quarto has "apoplexi" and the folio "apoplexie." Pope changed the word to "apoplex" for the sake of the metre.

132. We insert Exeunt, which the Camb. editors omit. See next note.

SCENE V -There is no new scene here in the early eds, and the modein ones generally follow Capell in directing that the king be "conveyed into an inner part of the room and laid upon a bed" D has the following stage-direction. "They place the King on a bed, a change of scene being supposed here" In a note he says "The audience of Shakespeare's time were to suppose that a change of scene took place as soon as the king was laid on the bed ' The Camb editors, who begin a new scene here, remark "Capell's stage-direction is not satisfactory, for it implies a change of scene, though none is indicated in the text. The king's couch would not be placed in a recess at the back of the stage, because he has to make speeches from it of considerable length. He must therefore be lying in front of the stage, where he could be seen and heard by the audience" To our mind it is perfectly clear that the king At the close of the scene (see 233 beis now carried to another 100m low) he asks what was the name of the chamber in which he "first did swoon" (see IV 4 IIO above), and, being told that it is the Jeiusalem Chamber, he asks to be borne to it, but if there is no change of scene here, he is already in the Jerusalem Chamber No commentator, so far as we are aware, refers to this Collier, who does not make a change of scene, but simply directs that the king be placed upon a bed "in an inner part of the room," says "Of course, Henry remains in the same apaitment until after the interview with his son, and then he retires to the Jerusalem Chamber," and yet he has referred to the swooning of the king in a note on iv 4 111 above, where he inserts from his Coll. MS the stage-direction "Falls back". The Jeiusalem Chamber is not a bedroom. The king is holding a council there when he swoons, and when he asks to be taken to "some other chamber" (that is, to a bedroom), he is of course obeyed, and the scene shifts to that chamber, where he remains until he asks to be borne back to the Jerusalem Chamber, on account of the prophecy concerning his death.

2 Dull "Gentle, soothing" (Johnson), or rather, as Malone and Schmidt give it, "producing dulness, disposing to sleep" Cf the use of dull-drowsy, in iii I. 15 above. So dulness—drowsiness in Temp 1 2 185 Pope changed dull to "slow," and Waib dull and to "doleing"

- 9, to These lines are printed as verse in the quarto, but as prose in the folio. On the other hand, 14 and 15 are made prose in the quarto, but two lines of verse (the first ending with 109) in the folio. These latter are commonly given as two lines, of which the first ends with suck. There is little to choose between that arrangement and the one in the text, which is White's
- 24 Ports. Portals, gates, as in T. and C. 14 4. 113, 138, Cor. 1 7. 1, v. 6. 6, etc
- 27 Biggen. "Nightcap" (Schmidt) The word properly means a coarse headband or cap like that worn by the Bigunes, an order of Flemsh nuns Cf. B J, Volpone "Get you a biggin more, your brain breaks loose."
 - 31. With safety. That is, while it gives safety or protects from danger.
 - 33. Suspire. Breathe. See K John, p 161.
 - 34. Perforce Of necessity See on 1. 1. 165 above.

42. Immediate. Next in place. Cf v 2 71 below See also Ham 1.

2. 109 "You are the most immediate to our throne"

60-65 Arranged as by Capell The quarto has five lines, ending with out, death, hither, disease, and are, the folio seven lines, ending with hence, out, suppose, Warwick, conjoins, me, and are.

64. Part. "Characteristic action" (Schmidt).

69, 70. Arranged as by Pope. In the quarto and the folio the first line ends with thoughts. Some editors follow Rowe in changing thoughts to "thought."

71. Engross'd. Amassed. Cf 1 Hen. IV. in. 2. 148 "To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf."

72 Strange-achieved. "Gained and yet not enjoyed" (Schmidt) hyphen is in the folio. Vaughan would read "strange, achieved," making strange=foreign, brought from a distance. Strange-achieved may be =gained in foreign lands.

76-80 Arranged as by Capell. In the folio the lines end with wax, hive, pains, engrossments, father.

76 Virtuous. Powerful (Schmidt), or perhaps=characteristic. See

M. N. D. p. 169.

77. Our thighs, etc. Capell gave "Packing our thighs," etc., and Hanmer "Our thighs all pack'd." D. conjectures "Our thighs with wax, our mouths with honey pack'd."

79, Murthered. The folio reading; not "murther'd."
80. Yield his engrossments. Do his accumulations yield. The quarto has "Yeelds," and the folio "Yields," corrected by Rowe. Sr. 1etains the old reading, assuming that taste is the subject, and his its

Cor 111 3 43, v. 3 120, etc.

84. Kindly. Natural, "not feigned" (Schmidt). See Much Ado, p. 154.

87. By. As a consequence of See Gr. 146.

91. Depart the chamber. Cf. Lear, m 5 1: "ere I depart his house,"

94. By thee. "In thy opinion" (Schmidt); but by may be = near or with 104. Seal'd up. Confirmed fully. The up has an intensive force, as often. See A. Y. L. p. 155.

108. Which thou hast whetted, etc. Cf. M. of V. IV. 1. 123:

"Not on thy sole, but on thy soul, harsh Jew, Thou mak'st thy knife keen" 115. Balm. Referring to the anomting-oil used in the ceremony of coronation. See Hen. V. p 175.

129. Gild his treble guilt. Pope omitted this line, and Warb. declared it to be "evidently the nonsense of some foolish player," but cf. Ruh. II. p. 172, note on line 73. For the play on guilt, cf. Hen V. ii. chor. 26: "the gilt of France-O guilt indeed!" Malone quotes Nicholson, Acolastus his Afterwit, 1600.

> "O sacred thirst of golde, what canst thou not? Some terms thee gylt, that every soule might reade, Even in thy name, thy guilt is great indeede 141 Dear Earnest Cf Temp p 124, note on The dear'st o' th' loss.

145 Affect Love. See Much Ado, p. 124.

149. Teacheth. Prompts me to, this prostrate and exterior bending being in apposition with obedience, which is=obeisance (Mason and Malone)

162. Carat. Spelt "charract" in the folio, and "karrat" in the quarto. Here it is used in the modern sense as expressing the degree of fineness in the gold, but in the only other instance in which it occurs in S it seems to express absolute weight. See C. of E. iv. 1. 28: "How much your chain weighs to the utmost carat"

163 Medicine potable. Alluding to the aurum potabile, or potable gold, of the alchemists. Johnson remarks "There has long prevailed an opinion that a solution of gold has great medicinal virtues, and that the incorruptibility of gold might be communicated to the body impregnated with it " Cf Chaucer, C. T 443 "For gold in phisik is a cordial"

186. Met Got, gained

194 Assistances For the plural see on iv 1 193 above.

196 Supposed That is, supposed to exist, "imaginary, not real" (Tohnson)

Fears=causes or objects of fear See on 1. 1. 95 above, and cf. Ham.

p. 232 200 Mode. "The form or state of things" (Johnson), the only instance of the word in S

Purchas'd "Here used in its legal sense, acquired by a man's own act (perquisitio) as opposed to an acquisition by descent" (Malone). Schmidt also explains it as "opposed to hereditary." Cf. A and C. 1 4. 14:

" hereditary, Rather than purchas'd"

Some take it to be=purloined Cf I Hen. IV p. 158.

201. More fairer. See on in 1 28 above.
202 Successively. "By order of succession Every usurper snatches a claim of hereditary right as soon as he can" (Johnson).

204. Griefs are gieen. Grievances are fresh, referring to the recent rebellion. For griefs, see on iv 1. 69 above.

205. My friends. The early eds. have "thy friends" The correction was suggested by Tyrwhitt. Perhaps Clarke is right in retaining the old reading. "By the first thy friends the king means those who are friendly inclined to the prince, and who, he goes on to say, must be made securely friends " D reads "my foes,"

208. By whose power. This of course modifies displac'd Cf Gr. 419a.

210. Them. Mason suggested "some," which Coll. adopts

214. Giddy "Hot-brained, excitable" (Schmidt), or, perhaps, unsteady, unsettled.

219. How I came by the crown, etc "This is a true picture of a mind divided between heaven and earth He prays for the prosperity of guilt while he deprecates its punishment" (Johnson)

233. Doth any name, etc. See the extract from Holinshed, p 145 above Steevens notes that a similar equivocal prediction occurs also in the Cronykil of Androw of Wyntown. Pope Sylvester, having sold himself to the devil, is told that he shall live to enjoy his honours until he sees Jerusalem. Soon afterwards his duties call him into a church which he had never visited before, and on his inquiring what the church is called, he is told that it is "Jerusalem in Vy Laterane". Thereupon the prophecy is completed by his death. Boswell adds that the same story of Pope Sylvester is told in Lodge's Devil Conjured, where, however, his holiness manages to outwit the devil.

The Jerusalem Chamber, which adjoins the southwest tower of Westminster Abbey, was built by Abbot Littlington between 1376 and 1386 as a guest-chamber, and probably derived its name from the tapestries of the history of Jerusalem with which it was afterwards hung Later it was used as a council-chamber (see p. 192 above), as it now is for the meetings of Convocation. The Westminster Assembly met here in 1643, having found the Chapel of Henry VII. too cold The existing decorations of the room are of the time of James I., but the stained glass is older,

ACT V.

Scene I.—By cock and pre. A petty oath in common use in the time of S. It occurs again in M W 1. 1. 316. Cock is probably a corruption of God, as in Cock's passion (T of S iv 1. 121), Cock's body, Cock's wounds, and many similar oaths found in the plays of that day. The pre may refer to the Romish service-book, which was sometimes so called; the word being more properly applied to a table or index in the book for finding out the service to be read upon each day In the preface to the English Prayer-Book, this table is referred to as follows: "Moreover the number and hardness of the rules called the Pie and the manifold changes," etc On the other hand, The Cock and Pie (with pictures of the cock and the magpie) was a common sign for taverns and alehouses. Blakeway gives an engraving of one at Bewdley. Boswell quotes A Catechisme by George Giffard, 1583, which seems to show that cock and pie referred only to other the birds or to the tavern-sign. "Men suppose that they do not offende when they do not sweare falsly, and because they will not take the name of God to abuse it, they sware by small thinges, as by cocke and pye, by the mouse foote, and many other suche like." Douce endeavours to prove that the oath had its origin in the grand feasts of the days of chivalry, when a roasted peacock was presented to each knight, who then made the particular vow he had chosen. When this custom had fallen into disuse, the peacock still continued to be a favourite dish at the feast, and was served up in a pie. "The recollection of the old peacock vows might occasion the less serious, or even burlesque, imitation of swearing not only by the bird itself, but also by the pie" Even if the oath referred at first to God and the service-book, this was doubtless forgotten in Shakespeare's time (like the connection of marry with the Virgin Mary), and the cock and the pie came to be associated in the popular mind with the birds Not a few such "illusive etymologies" have found pictorial illustration in the old tavern-signs

NOTES. 196

9. William cook Cf. 1 Hen. IV 11. 1. 12 "since Robin ostler died" II. Precepts. "Justice's warrants" (Johnson). Cf Hen. V 111. 3. 26

Vaughan remarks "This accords with an old practice of sowing a later wheat on the headland than in the rest of the field, because the headland, being used for turning the plough, naturally came into condition for sowing later than the rest of the field It is still common in some parts to see red wheat-that is, a spring wheat-on the headland, together with white wheat—that is, winter wheat—in the field "

24 Kickshaws. We find kickshawses in T. N 1. 3 122, the only other instance of the word in S

> " For frende in courte are better is Than peny is in purse, certis"

31. Well concerted. A happy concert! "Justice Shallow applauds his servingman's grinning jest with the same expression that Nym uses when he says 'Is not the humour concerted" in M W 1 3 26" (Clarke)

33. Woncot. Like Wincot (T of S. ind 2 23), a corruption of Wilne-cote, the name of a village near Stratford See p. 29 above

45. He shall have no wrong A fair sample of the course of justice in that day. Blakeway cites a speech of Sir Nicholas Bacon, in pailiament, 1559: "Is it not a monstrous disguising to have a justice a maintainer, acquitting some for gain, enditing others for malice, bearing with him as his servant, overthrowing the other as his enemy?" A member of the House of Commons in 1601 defined a "justice of the peace" as a creature that "for half a dozen chickens will dispense with half a dozen penal statutes "

51. Tall. A joke of Shallow's. See on ni. 2. 55 above

55. Quantities. That is, small pieces; as in T of S. iv. 3. 112, and K.

70hn, v. 4. 23

Clarke remarks. "The relish with which Falstaff each time stays by himself to witticize upon Shallow's peculiarities, the gusto with which he makes the justice's leanness furnish him with as ample store of humour as his own fatness, the shrewdness with which he penetrates the tiuth of the relative qualities and positions of the country magistrate and his servingman, all show how thoroughly the author himself enjoyed the composition of this thrice-admirable comedy-postrait character"

57 Semblable Similar, used as a noun in Ham. v 2 124 and T of A IV 3 22

62 Consent Agreement, accord

64 Near their master That is, being intimate with him, having influence with him See Much Ado, p 130, note on Near

73. Sad Sober, serious. Cf Much Ado, 1. I 185. "Speak you this with a sad brow" See also A Y. L p 175
"We may gather from this," says Clarke, "that Falstaff enhanced the effect of some of his jokes by staid utterance and a quiet dry manner; but others, be sure, he accompanied by a broad 10ar, and all with a twinkle of his eye that spoke volumes in archness and roguish meaning"

36 Impartial. The quarto reading; the folio has "imperial" 37. Ragged. Beggarly, wretched. Warb thought the word had "no sense," and substituted "rated" (=sought for).

For estall'd remission. That is, a pardon that is sure not to be granted, the case having been prejudged Malone says "I believe for estall'd only means asked before it is granted If he will grant me pardon unasked, so; if not, I will not condescend to solicit it." J. H. explains a forestall'd remission as "one which is precluded from being absolute, by the refusal of the offender to accuse or alter his conduct."

48. Not Amurath, etc. Amurath the Third died in 1596, leaving a son Amurath, who, on coming to the throne, invited his brothers to a feast, where he had them all strangled, in order to prevent any inconvenient disputes concerning the succession. This allusion helps to fix the date of the play See p. 29 above.

50 By my faith Altered in the folio to "to speak truth," like so many other expressions which the Master of the Revels doubtless considered profane.

62. No other. Nothing else, as in Macb v 4.8.

"We learn no other but the confident tyrant Keeps still in Dunsinane," etc.

96. Taking your part. Acting in your behalf.

97 Soft silencing Mildly restraining Perhaps Theo. was right in changing soft to "so" According to the king (see 70 above), the justice's treatment of him had not been soft.

98 Cold considerance. Calm or dispassionate reflection. S. uses considerance only here.

99 Speak in your state. Say, "in your regal character and office, not with the passion of a man interested, but with the impartiality of a legislator" (Johnson)

109 Proper Own; as in Temp iii 3 60 "their proper selves," etc. 113. For which I do commit, etc. Verplanck remarks "The reader must bear in mind that the present tenure of office for life by the English judges is but modern, and that, under the Plantagenets and Tudois, a Chief-Justice might be removed like any other officer of the crown. Henry's voluntary retaining the Chief-Justice in his high station is. therefore, a manly acknowledgment of his own error, and a magnanimous tribute to the uprightness of the magistrate The story of the Prince's insolence, and his commitment to prison, is strictly historical, being related briefly by Hall and Holinshed, and more minutely by Sir Thomas Elyot, in his book of political ethics entitled The Governour. But these are all silent as to Henry V's after-treatment of the Chief-Justice, or the latter's being continued in office after the accession of Henry V. Several of the Shakespearian historical critics, as Sir John Hawkins, Malone, and Steevens, in the last century, and very lately Tyler and Courtenay, deny the fact itself, and some of them in a tone of rebuke for the 'author's deviation from history' I should be sorry to lose a noble example of moderation and magnanimity, in the exercise of political patronage, from history, but if those comments are correct, Shakespeare deserves the higher honour of not having merely adopted and beautifully enforced, but having invented the striking incident, embodying a noble lesson of political ethics, which in our own days even republican rulers may profit I incline to the opinion that the English commentators are in error as to the fact, and that the poet has merely decorated and enforced the truth, which probably came down to him by popular and general tradition, as a plain fact, to which he has given the impressive weight of moral ınstıuction

"Hawkins asserts that the poet 'has deviated from historical truth by bringing the Chief-Justice and Henry W together, as it is expressly said by Fuller, in his Worthies of Yorkshire, that Gascoigne died in the lifetime of Henry IV. (viz 1st Nov. 1412) Malone also mentions Shakespeare's 'anachronism,' on the authority of a transcript (in the Gentleman's Magazine) of the inscription on the Chief-Justice's tomb, 'once legible,' which records his death as '17 Decr. Ann. Dom. 1412.' Steevens, I know not on what authority, places his death 13th Dec. 1413 Henry IV died March 20, 1413. The discrepancy of these dates would throw some doubt on any one of them, or all of them, were there no contradiction as to the year But they are all overthrown by a recent discovery by Mr Tyler of the record of Sir William Gascoigne's will, bearing date 20th March, 1419, showing that there must have been some error of the press of of a copyist in the dates before mentioned. But Tyler and Courtenay say that Gascoigne was left out of office at Henry V.'s accession, which is still less to the royal honour, and perhaps more to the Yet old Stowe, the most accurate of chroniclers, says 'William Gascoigne was Chief-Justice of the King's Bench from the sixt of Henry IV. to the third Henry V.

"Stowe's authority may be fortified by an American author, who must have little thought, in preparing his curious and interesting volume, of being quoted by a Shakespearian annotator The Judicial Chronicle (Cambridge, Mass, 1834), by George Gibbs, of New York, is a most exact chronological list of the judges of the higher courts of England and America, from the earliest periods, the lists of the earlier English judges being compiled from Dugdale, Beatson, and Wooliycke In that list Gascoigne is recorded to have 'died or retired in 1414, the second year of Henry V, and the same date is given for the appointment of his successor, Hankford. Upon these statements, the more probable conclusion would seem to be that Gascoigne must have been retained in office during the first two years of Henry V., or, as Stowe says, 'to the third year of Henry V.,' and that his retirement was then voluntary The reader will judge for himself, on these authorities, whether the merit of this fine lesson of political magnanimity to a personal adversary is due wholly to the poet, or whether he must share that honour with the king."

115 Remembrance Reminder, admonition

3. Caraways. Goldsmith thought that apples of that name were meant: but the best critics agree that the reference is to caraway seeds, or some confection containing them Malone quotes Florio's Second Frutes, 1591, where, after a dinner, a servant is ordered to bring in "apples, pears, ... some bisket, and carrawaies, with other comfects," also the black-letter Booke of Carvyng "Serve after meat, peres, nuts, strawberies, huitleberies and hard cheese also blaudrels or pipins, with caraway in colects" Steevens adds from Cogan's Haven of Health, 1595 "Howbert we are wont to eate carawaies or biskets, or some other kind of comfits or seedes together with apples, thereby to breake winde ingendred by them and surely it is a very good way for students"

11 Husband An old form of husbandman, which is substituted in the 3d folio. Cf. Spenser, F Q iv. 3 29

- 63. By God's liggens. An oath of Shallow's own making, omitted of course in the folio
- 64. Will not out. Will not fail you; a sportsman's expression. St. quotes Turbervile, Booke of Hunting "If they run it endways orderly and make it good, then when they hold in together meirily, we say, They are in crie" Cf A. and C. ii. 7 36 "I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out."
- 71. Do me right. A common expression in drinking healths. Steevens cites Massinger, The Bondman.

"These glasses contain nothing. Do me right, As ere you hope for liberty."

72. And dub me knight It was a custom in the time of S to drink a mighty bumper kneeling, to the health of one's mistress. He who performed this exploit was dubbed a knight for the evening Cf. The Yorkshire Tragedy, 1608. "They call it knighting in London when they dlink upon their knees. Come follow me, I'll give you all the degrees of it in order" (Malone).

73 Samingo. A boozy abbreviation of "San Domingo," which was a common burden of drinking-songs. Steevens quotes Nash's Summer's

Last Will and Testament, 1600

"Monseur Mingo for quaffing doth surpass In cup, in can, or glass, God Bacchus, do me right, And dub me knight, Domingo"

119 As nail in door "This proverbial expression is oftener used than understood. The door nail is the nail on which in ancient doors the knocker strikes. It is therefore used as a comparison to any one irrecoverably dead, one who has fallen (as Virgil says) multa morte, that is, with abundant death, such as iteration of strokes on the head would naturally produce" (Steevens).

126. Carry Master Silence to bed. See p 24 above

133. Blessed are they that. The quarto reading, changed in the folio

7 Nut-hook "A name of reproach for a catchpole" (Johnson). Cf. M W 1 1. 171 "if you run the nut-hook's humour on me" As we have seen in 11 4 above, Doll has a copious vocabulary of abusive epithets at command.

13 Thin man in a censer. The old censers of thin metal had often a rudely hammered or embossed figure in the middle of the pierced convex lid (Steevens). These censers were used for burning perfumes in dwelling-houses, which often needed such sweetening in those unsavoury times. See Much Ado, p 127, note on Smoking a musty room. Cf also Rich. II. p. 167, note on The presence strewed. We believes the meaning to be "that the thin officer wore some kind of cap which she likened to a censer;" and he is probably right.

- 15 It doth so In the quarto this speech is given to Pistol, as are the two repetitions of it below. The tolio corrects the error here, but omits to do it there.
 - 24. Stained with travel. Cf I Hen IV 1 I 64

"Stain'd with the variation of each soil Betwixt that Holmedon and this seat of ours"

28 'T is semper idem, etc "Pistol uses a Latin expression, 'Ever the same, for without this there is nothing,' and then goes on to allude to an English proverbial phrase, 'All in all, and all in every part,' which he seems to give as its free rendering" (Clarke). Both the quarto and the 1st folio have obsque, which the 2d folio and most modern eds correct to "absque," but the blunder may be intentional See on in 4 145 above.

Verplanck remarks "I do not find that any of the English critics have explained this sudden burst of learning in Ancient Pistol, though they note that the 'all in every part' is an old phrase of metaphysical poetry, and applied to the soul by Sir John Davies and Drayton. In the absence of authority, I take them all to be heraldic devices, then familiar (as the 'semper idem' certainly was), such as Pistol would be likely to have observed, as well as Shakespeare's audiences, in the pageants and processions of the day, and they are jumbled together quite in Pistol's vein, to the great edification of Justice Shallow"

56 Reply not, etc "We see by this that there was a light in Falstaff's eye, a play of his hip that betokened some repartee as to wherefore the grave should naturally gape wider for him than for other and slenderer men, and the king, knowing of old that once let Falstaff retort and he is silenced, forestalls the intended reply by forbidding and condemning

and so resumes the thread of his discourse, and goes moralizing on to the end of the chapter Thus the poet copies nature with great skill, and shows us how apt men are to fall back into their old customs, when the change is not made by degrees and brought into a habit, but determined of at once, on the motives of honour, interest, or reason"

90 To the Fleet. That is, to the Fleet Prison * This is evidently the Justice's sentence, and he should be held responsible for it, not the King, who has left the stage, and who had simply ordered that Falstaff should not come near him "by ten mile" He had, moreover, promised that the knight should have "competence of life," and had even held out the hope of "advancement" in case he should reform The Chief-Justice, looking at the matter from a judicial point of view, naturally felt that the fat old reprobate had been let off too easily, and took the responsibility of punishing him more according to his deserts. The king, whom the critics generally have been disposed to blame here, doubtless reversed the hard sentence afterwards, for we find Falstaff and his friends all at liberty in the opening scenes of Henry V. Sir John, however, does not rally from the disappointment he has met in being turned away by his "10yal Hal" His heait, as Pistol expresses it, "is fracted and corroborate," but it is a comfort to know that he dies in his old quarters at the Boar's Head, with his faithful old friend Dame Quickly to care for him in his last hours, and not in the Fleet Prison.

^{*} If the reader is not familiar with the topography of London in the olden time, he may not know that this prison, like Fleet Street, takes its name from the Fleet River, may not know that this prison, like Fleet Street, takes its name from the Fleet River, which used to flow through the valley now bridged by the Holborn Viaduct, turing the mills which gave a name to Turnmill Street (see on in 2 283 above) I he prison (demolished in 1844) had a gate on the Fleet, like the Traitor's Gate of the Tower upon the Thames. It was first used for those who were condemned by the Stat Chamber, and not, as H supposes from its name, "for the accommodation of naughty sailors."

95. Si fortuna, etc. See on ii 4 145 above.

98 Shall all be very well provided for Even the cold-blooded John of Lancaster seems to endoise the merciful policy of the king, and to assume that the orders to carry Falstaff and his company to the Fleet are not to interfere with it Possibly they were put in prison only until arrangements should be made for carrying out the king's purposes concerning them But Clarke may be right in his opinion that Prince John, like the Chief-Justice, rejoices at the disgrace of Falstaff, "but he puts a demure face on the affair, and applicable the 'fairness' of the proceeding, while saying nothing about the extreme manner in which the king's orders are carried out."

99 Conversations. Habits, behaviour. Cf A. and C. 11. 6 131: "Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation," where the modern sense of conversation would be a bull. See also M W 11 1. 25. Bacon, in Essay 27, speaks of "a love and desire to sequester a mans selfe, for a higher conversation," and Latimer, in one of his Sermons, refers to "the conversations or doings of the saints." Cf. Ps xxxvii. 14, 1. 23.

106 I heard a bird so sing. This expression was proverbial, and we sometimes hear it even nowadays. Steevens cites the old ballad of The

Rising in the North

"I heare a bird sing in mine eare, That I must either fight or flee"

EPILOGUE.

It is doubtful whether S. wrote this Epilogue. W. remarks that the speaker, who was a dancer, seems to imply that it is not the poet's by saying that it is of his own making. "It is a manifest and poor imitation of the Epilogue to A. Y. L."

1. Courtesy. The same word as curtsy. Cf. A. Y. L. epil. 23, and see

5. Should. Walker conjectures "shall," but should was sometimes used instead of shall, even after a present tense. See Gr. 325

Doubt=fear, suspect; as often See K John, p 163, or Ham. p. 187. 11. Break. Become bankrupt; as in M. of V. iii. I. 120. "he cannot choose but break," etc.

13. Bate Remit; as in Temp. i. 2. 250:

"thou didst promise To bate me a full year," etc.

18. All the gentlewomen, etc. Johnson compares the epilogue to A Y.L. for "the trick of influencing one part of the audience by the favour of the other."

23. Our humble author, etc. Dowden remarks: "The epilogue to 2 Henry IV. (whether it was written by S or not remains doubtful) had promised that 'our humble author will continue the story with Sir John in it.' But our humble author decided (with a finer judgment than Cervantes in the case of his hero) that the public was not to be indulged in laughter for laughter's sake at the expense of his play. The tone of the entire play of Henry V. would have been altered if Falstaff had been allowed to appear in it. During the monarchy of a Henry IV. no glorious enthusiasm animated England It was distracted by civil contention. Mouldy, Shallow, and Feeble were among the champions of the royal cause. . . . At such a time our imagination can loiter among the humours and follies When the nation was divided into various parties, when no interest was absorbing and supreme, Sir John might well appear upon his throne at Eastcheap, monarch by virtue of his wit, and form with his company of followers a state within the state. But with the coronation of Henry V. opens a new period, when a higher interest animates history, when the national life was unified, and the glorious struggle with France began. At such a time private and secondary interests must cease, the magnificent swing, the impulse and advance of the life of England occupy our whole imagination. It goes hard with us to part from Falstaff, but, like the king, part from him we must, we cannot be encumbered with that tun of flesh, Agincourt is not the field for splendid mendacity. Falstaff, whose principle of life is an attempt to coruscate away the facts of life, and who was so potent during the Prince's minority, would now necessarily appear trivial. There is no place for Falstaff any longer on earth, he must find refuge 'in Arthur's bosom'"

206 NOTES.

27 For Oldcastle died a martyr, etc. An important part of the evidence that Falstaff was originally called Oldcastle in the play. See I

Hen IV pp 10, 143

29 And so kneel . . to pray for the queen In the quarto these words (reading "I kneele") are placed at the end of the first paragraph of the epilogue, after promise you infinitely Perhaps, as W suggests, the epilogue, as at first written, consisted only of this paragraph, and the necessary transposition was overlooked when the rest was added in the quarto. It was the custom in the poet's time to end the performance with a prayer for the sovereign. In many instances, the form of prayer is found at the close of the play; as, for example, in Preston's Cambyses (quoted by Steevens)

"As duty binds us, for our noble queene let us pray,
And for her honourable councel, the truth that they may use,
To practise justice, and defend her grace eche day,
To maintaine God's word they may not refuse,
To correct all those that would her grace and grace's laws abuse:
Beseeching God over us she may reign long,
To be guided by trueth and defended from wrong
Amen, q Thomas Preston"

This custom seems to have been adopted from the old moralities.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS—The view of Eastcheap (frontispiece) illustrates the street architecture of the time. The neighbouring church of ST Michael, Cornhill, is shown as it then appeared, on the authority of an old drawing engraved in the Londina Illustrata. The tower was taken down in 1421, and the church was destroyed in the Great Fire of 1666 The street views on pp 54 and 119 are also illustrative of the London of that day In the latter we see the north transept of Westminster Abbey, which was then the principal entrance, the western poition of the church being unfinished. The houses that hemmed it in were not cleared away until a comparatively recent date The view of "Paul's Walk" on p 35 will give an idea of the long nave of the grand old cathedral, and of its "base uses" as "an house of merchandise" The scene in Coventry (p 30) shows St Michael's and Trinity churches, with one of the ancient pageants" going on in the foreground. Shakespeare in his boyhood may have seen such a performance, as the exhibitions were not suppressed until 1580 The noble spire of St. Michael's, 303 feet high, was old even then, having been finished in 1395 Trimity Church was built in the 13th century, but the present spire was erected in 1664-7 to replace the original one blown down in 1664. The portrait of Sir William Gascoigne (p 53) represents him in his judicial robes, and is taken from his monument in Harwood Church, Yorkshire All these illustrations are from Knight's Pictorial Shakspere

ILLUSTRATED. 16MO, CLOTH, 56 CTS. PER VOL; PAPER, 40 CTS. PER VOL

In the preparation of this edition of the English Classics it has been the aim to adapt them for school and home reading, in essentially the same way as Greek and Latin Classics are edited for educational purposes. The chief requisites are a pure text (expurgated, if necessary), and the notes needed for its thorough explanation and illustration.

Each of Shakespeare's plays is complete in one volume, and is preceded by an Introduction containing the "History of the Play," the "Sources of the Plot," and "Critical Comments on the Play"

From Hobace Howard Furness, Ph D, LL D, Edutor of the "New Variorum Shakespeure"

No one can examine these volumes and fail to be impressed with the conscientious accuracy and scholarly completeness with which they are edited. The educational purposes for which the notes are written Mr Rolfe never loses sight of, but like "a well-experienced archer hits the mark his eye doth level at."

From F. J FURNIVALL, Director of the New Shakspere Sounty, London.

The merit I see in Mr Rolfe's school editions of Shakspere's Plays over those most widely used in England is that Mr Rolfe edits the plays as works of a poet, and not only as productions in Tudor English—Some editors think that all they have to do with a play is to state its source and explain its hard words and allusions, they treat it as they would a charter or a catalogue of household furniture, and then rest satisfied. But Mr Rolfe, while clearing up all verbal difficulties as carefully as any Dryasdust, always adds the choicest extracts he can find, on the spirit and special "note" of each play, and on the leading characteristics of its chief personages—He does not leave the student without help in getting at Shakspere's chief attributes, his characterization and poetic power. And every practical teacher knows that while every boy can look out hard words in a lexicon for himself, not one in a score can, unhelped, catch points of and realize character, and feel and express the distinctive individuality of each play as a poetic creation

From Prof Edward Dowden, LLD, of the University of Dublin, Author of "Shakspere His Mind and Art"

I incline to think that no edition is likely to be so useful for school and home reading as yours. Your notes contain so much accurate instruction, with so little that is superfluous, you do not neglect the æsthetic study of the play, and in externals, paper, type, binding, etc., you make a book "pleasant to the eyes" (as well as "to be desired to make one wise")—no small matter, I think, with young readers and with old.

From Edwin A. Abbott, M A., Author of "Shakespearian Grammar."

I have not seen any edition that compresses so much necessary information into so small a space, nor any that so completely avoids the common faults of commentaries on Shakespeare—needless repetition, superfluous explanation, and unscholar-like ignoring of difficulties.

From HIRAM CORSON, M.A., Professor of Anglo-Saxon and English Literature, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.

In the way of annotated editions of separate plays of Shakespeare, for educational purposes, I know of none quite up to Rolfe's.

From Piof F. J CHILD, of Harvard University.

I read your "Merchant of Venice" with my class, and found it in every respect an excellent edition. I do not agree with my friend White in the opinion that Shakespeare requires but few notes—that is, if he is to be thoroughly understood. Doubtless he may be enjoyed, and many a hard place slid over. Your notes give all the help a young student requires, and yet the reader for pleasure will easily get at just what he wants. You have indeed been conscientiously concise.

Under date of July 25, 1879, Prof CHILD adds Mr Rolfe's editions of plays of Shakespeare are very valuable and convenient books, whether for a college class or for private study. I have used them with my students, and I welcome every addition that is made to the series. They show care, research, and good judgment, and are fully up to the time in scholarship. I fully agree with the opinion that experienced teachers have expressed of the excellence of these books.

From Rev. A. P. PEABODY, D.D., Professor in Harvard University.

I regard your own work as of the highest merit, while you have turned the labors of others to the best possible account. I want to have the higher classes of our schools introduced to Shakespeare chief of all, and then to other standard English authors, but this cannot be done to advantage, unless under a teacher of equally rare gifts and abundant leisure, or through editions specially prepared for such use. I trust that you will have the requisite encouragement to proceed with a work so happily begun.

From the Examiner and Chronicle, N. Y.

We repeat what we have often said, that there is no edition of Shake-speare's which seems to us preferable to Mr. Rolfe's. As mere specimens of the printer's and binder's art they are unexcelled, and their other merits are equally high. Mr. Rolfe, having learned by the practical experience of the class-room what aid the average student really needs in order to read Shakespeare intelligently, has put just that amount of aid into his notes, and no more. Having said what needs to be said, he stops there. It is a rare virtue in the editor of a classic, and we are proportionately grateful for it.

From the N Y. Times

This work has been done so well that it could hardly have been done better. It shows throughout knowledge, taste, discriminating judgment, and, what is rarer and of yet higher value, a sympathetic appreciation of the poet's moods and purposes.

From the Pacific School Journal, San Francisco.

This edition of Shakespeare's plays bids fair to be the most valuable aid to the study of English literature yet published. For educational purposes it is beyond praise. Each of the plays is printed in large clear type and on excellent paper. Every difficulty of the text is clearly explained by copious notes. It is remarkable how many new beauties one may discern in Shakespeare with the aid of the glossaries attached to these books... Teachers can do no higher, better work than to inculcate a love for the best literature, and such books as these will best aid them in cultivating a pure and refined taste.

From the Christian Union, N Y

Mr W J Rolfe's capital edition of Shakespeare—by far the best edition for school and parlor use. We speak after some practical use of it in a village Shakespeare Club. The notes are bijef but useful, and the necessary expurgations are managed with discriminating skill.

From the Academy, London

Mr Rolfe's excellent series of school-editions of the Plays of Shake-speare. . . . Mr. Rolfe's editions differ from some of the English ones in looking on the plays as something more than word-puzzles. They give the student helps and hints on the characters and meanings of the plays, while the word-notes are also full and posted up to the latest date. . . Mr Rolfe also adds to each of his books a most useful "Index of Words and Phrases explained"

SELECT POEMS OF OLIVER GOLDSMITH. Edited, with Notes, by William J Rolfe, A.M., formerly Head Master of the High School, Cambridge, Mass. Illustrated. 16mo, Paper, 40 cents; Cloth, 56 cents. (Uniform with Rolfe's Shakespeare)

The carefully airanged editions of "The Merchant of Venice" and other of Shakespeare's plays prepared by Mr. William J Rolfe for the use of students will be remembered with pleasure by many readers, and they will welcome another volume of a similar character from the same source, in the form of the "Select Poems of Oliver Goldsmith," edited with notes fuller than those of any other known edition, many of them original with the editor—Boston Transcript

Mr Rolfe is doing very useful work in the preparation of compact hand-books for study in English literature. His own personal culture, and his long experience as a teacher, give him good knowledge of what is wanted in this way—The Congregationalist, Beston.

Mr. Rolfe has prefixed to the Poems selections illustrative of Goldsmith's character as a man and grade as a poet, from sketches by Macaulay, Thackeray, George Colman, Thomas Campbell, John Forster, and Washington Irving. He has also appended, at the end of the volume, a body of scholarly notes explaining and illustrating the poems, and dealing with the times in which they were written, as well as the incidents and circumstances attending their composition. — Christian Intelligencer. N. Y

The notes are just and discriminating in tone, and supply all that is necessary either for understanding the thought of the several poems, or for a critical study of the language. The use of such books in the school-room cannot but contribute largely toward putting the study of English literature upon a sound basis; and many an adult reader would find in the present volume an excellent opportunity for becoming critically acquainted with one of the greatest of last century's poets.—Appleton's Yournal, N. Y.

THOMAS GRAY.

SELECT POEMS OF THOMAS GRAY. Edited, with Notes, by WILLIAM J. ROLFE, A.M., formerly Head Master of the High School, Cambridge, Mass. Illustrated. Square 16mo, Paper, 40 cents; Cloth, 56 cents. (Uniform with Rolfe's Shakespeare)

Mr. Rolfe has done his work in a manner that comes as near to perfection as man can approach. He knows his subject so well that he is competent to instruct all in it, and readers will find an immense amount of knowledge in his elegant volume, all set forth in the most admirable order, and breathing the most liberal and enlightened spirit, he being a warm appreciator of the divinity of genius —Boston Traveller.

The great ment of these books hes in their carefully-edited text, and in the fulness of their explanatory notes Mi Rolfe is not satisfied with simply expounding, but he explores the entire field of English literature, and therefrom gathers a multitude of illustrations that are interesting in themselves and valuable as a commentary on the text. He not only instructs, but stimulates his readers to fresh exertion, and it is this stimulation that makes his labors so productive in the school-room.—Saturday Evening Gazette, Boston.

Mr. William J. Rolfe, to whom English literature is largely indebted for annotated and richly-illustrated editions of several of Shakespeare's Plays, has treated the "Select Poems of Thomas Gray" in the same way—just as he had previously dealt with the best of Goldsmith's poems.—

The Press, Phila.

Mr. Rolfe's edition of Thomas Gray's select poems is marked by the same discriminating taste as his other classics—Springfield Republican.

Mr. Rolfe's rare abilities as a teacher and his fine scholarly tastes enable him to prepare a classic like this in the best manner for school use. There could be no better exercise for the advanced classes in our schools than the critical study of our best authors, and the volumes that Mr. Rolfe has prepared will hasten the time when the study of mere form will give place to the study of the spirit of our literature.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

An elegant and scholarly little volume. - Christian Intelligencer, N. Y.
